English West Coast.

LINERS BATTERED

London, Dec. 27.—Twenty-eight lives and five ships have been lost in terrific gales and hurricanes raging in the Atlantic and along the coast of England, according to reports here today.

The toll of the storm continued to grow as additional details of its fury came in from ports of the western English coast. The destructiveness was extended far into the ocean battering even the strongest liners, according to officers, the violent rising from the westward.

On the liner Celtic arriving from America passengers and officers reported the worst weather in thirty years in the Atlantic Ocean.

Washington, Dec. 27.—The storm that has been raging in the Atlantic ocean for the last few days and endangered many steamers will strike the Middle and North Atlantic states late tonight or tomorrow, the Weather Bureau forecasters today.

Storms, when said gales strike, with cold weather were forecasted for the entire northern coast north of the Virginia capes.

Protection For Payroll
Messengers To Be Topic Of Police And Bankers

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 27.—Superintendent of Police John Cuthbert today called a conference of bankers on plans to protect payroll messengers.

Cuthbert announced the police were still without tangible clues in the matter of J. R. Dennis, a paymaster of the Pittsburg Coal Company, who was held up Saturday and robbed of the Christmas payroll of $20,000.

Early today three unmasked men held up G. Murphy, treasurer of the South Hill Republican Club and robbed him of $1,500 he was taking to his home.

JOIN THE "GO TO READING CLUB"

All American Legion men who have not joined the "Go to Reading Club" had better join, as every one gets a free ticket for "snaps" and the tickets are getting pretty well raised.

One who wants to miss this trip, the Worrell M. Jones at the Sheriffs Club, or Bob Wallace at the Trust Co.

REPUBLICAN SENATORS IN CONFERENCE
PLAN FIGHT ON THE BORAH AMENDMENT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—At a general council in Senator Lodge's office today more than a score of Republican senators agreed on plans to fight the Borah proposition for an International Economic Conference.

Senator Poinsett of Washington was selected to make a point of order against Borah's amendment to the Naval appropriation bill. Poinsett will ask that the amendment be barred on the ground that it is new and general legislation on an appropriation bill.

It was understood that the action was taken with the approval of President Harding.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—A conference to consider land armaments as suggested by Senator Borah in connection with his proposal for an economic conference would be useless, Senator Lodge declared today in a speech to the Senate unles, "in advance France withdrew her objection and agreed to co-

NEW YORK BANKING LEADER SAYS UNITED STATES HAS AMPLE GROUND FOR
SANE OPTIMISM

By FRANCIS H. SISON
Vice President Guaranty Trust Co.
of New York.

(Written for The United Press.)

It is striking evidence of the great resilience of this nation that, in spite of the serious adverse influences which persisted in 1922, the closing months of the year disclosed a situation in general very materially improved, as compared with conditions 12 months prior.

Since the beginning of 1922 the general level of prices has been advancing and the volume of industrial production has been increasing. There has been marked improvement in the iron and steel industry, which is now employed at about 80 per cent. of capacity. All of the textile industries are now very active and the automobile manufacturers have had a very prosperous year. Unemployment throughout the country has ceased to be a serious problem; in fact, there is a marked shortage of common labor.

After a year of bountiful crops improving prices, and increasing industrial activity, the outlook for the future may be considered distinctly favorable. In any event, the definite basis for continued prosperity now exists, although it must be admitted that the road ahead is by no means free from obscurities and obstructions.

A well sustained volume of foreign trade, for example, is an important element in a satisfactory economic situation in the United States, and there is ample cause for apprehension over the present financial and economic difficulties in Europe, for which a solution is still to be found. A serious reaction would certainly result in America if the great continental markets were thrown into further disorganization.

The Soldier Bonus.

The financial outlook is excellent and, gives assurance of ability to support any sound development of business that may be desired. Through the President's veto of the soldiers' bonus bill the nation has for a time being escaped the enormous financial burden which would have been imposed by that legislation, but the effort to secure a blanket distribution of public funds to the soldiers of the late war will undoubtedly be continued and, if successful, would constitute a serious check to hope for reduction of taxation and amortization of the national debt.

A similar menace to the public credit lies in the proposals to weaken the Federal Reserve Board by appointments for political or class purposes in its personnel and to institute special and perhaps unsound extension of credit to selected interests in the community.

The labor situation also is fraught with obvious danger to the balanced and orderly readjustment of the economic structure. The restriction of immigration has strengthened the strategic position of organized labor.

President Harding has recently declared that the nation is "olvent financially, sound economically, untried in genius, unexcelled in industry, resolute in determination and unwavering in faith." If the basic economic and financial factors can be wisely protected and these human qualities can be assured free play, there need be no interruption to the continued progress of the United States towards prosperity.

It would be folly, however, not to recognize that such protection and freedom can by no means be taken for granted, but demand an intelligent initiative and a sustained courage on the part of the leaders and majority of the people if they are to be assured. The problems in industry, finance and international relations which confront the nation are many and difficult and will severely test its capacity to manage its affairs with wisdom. There is evident a tendency to experiment with theories of finance and administration which have been often discredited by past experience and unless this tendency can be controlled, our present fortunate position may be seriously compromised.

The favorable features in the present situation in the United States, however, would seem definitely to outweigh the unfavorable ones, and there is reason to entertain a sane optimism in regard to the prospect of excellent business conditions for the first six months of 1923 at least, and if the possible difficulties to which reference has been made can be successfully overcome, the coming year should place the nation in a stronger economic and financial position than ever before. Its situation may be deemed favorable indeed, when compared with that of most great countries in the world today, where far heavier burdens exist and far more harassing and critical problems now confront their peoples.

LEADERS OF HOODED MURDERERS UNDER SURVEILLANCE TODAY

Mer Rouge, La., Dec. 27.—The men who are alleged to have been in the leadership in the operations of hooded terrorists in Morehouse Parish are under surveillance today and may be arrested at any time.

The next one due to be taken into custody is a man suspected of having dynamited Lake La Fourche to bring up the corpses of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards, who were flogged, wired to iron wheels and thrown into the muddy, swampy pool last August. The masked organization wished to bury the bodies elsewhere before they could be recovered by detectives investigating the Daniels and Richards disappearance mystery.

Doctor B. M. McKoin, reform mayor of Mer Rouge, was arrested at Baltimore yesterday and efforts will be made to extradite him to face charges of murder in connection with the abduction and killing of the men found in Lake La Fourche.

Former Mayor Of Mer
Rouge, La., Arrested
At Baltimore Today

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 27.—Dr. B. M. McKoin, former Mayor of Mer Rouge, La., was held without bail today for action of the Louisiana authorities following arrest on a charge of murder in connection with killing by hooded terrorists there. McKoin will be kept in jail ten days awaiting the arrival of officers.

Gov. J. M. Parker of Louisiana wired to Captain Charles Burns the second time asking that McKoin be held until authorities could reach Baltimore. An hour after his wife a Mer Rouge banking house wired that they would deposit in a Baltimore bank any amount of money required for bail.

TOLEDO SUFFERS
$720,000 LOSS BY
FIVE BIG FIRES

Toledo, O., Dec. 27.—One man was killed and three firemen were injured and property damaged amounting to $720,000 was reported in five fires here today.

Fifty-nine families were driven into the street when flames totally destroyed the one half Million Dollar Delman apartment house, W. A. Faunce, a real-estate agent, died of burns received when fire cut off his escape.

A defective boiler is said to be responsible for the apartment house blaze but police declare the other fires were of incendiary origin.

LITTLE GIRL IS SHOT
IN FOREHEAD WHILE
ALONE IN HER HOME

New York, N. Y., Dec. 27.—The murder of Teresa McCarthy, aged ten, known in the Brooklyn neighborhood where she lived as the "little vamp" because of her wifeliness and beauty, completely ended her pale career today.

The girl was found with a bullet hole in her forehead by her mother Mrs. Pauline McCarthy when the latter returned from her work late last night. The little body was lying on the floor of the dining room surrounded by Christmas toys.

The child had been alone all day while the mother a divorcee was at work. When Mrs. McCarthy returned she found the apartment door locked and had to get the janitor before she could enter. Police who were called immediately declared there was no evidence of anyone having been in the apartment.

CURZON NOTIFIES BRITAIN CANNOT GIVE UP OIL FIELD

Lausanne, Dec. 27.—Lord Curzon, British minister, sent a note to Ismet Pasha, Turkish leader, declaring it is absolutely impossible for Britain to meet the Turks' demand and give up the great Mosul oil region.

Curzon said, however, that the Allies will retrace the northern frontier in conjunction with Turkish experts.

SENTENCES HANDED OUT IN THREE OF
THE LIQUOR LAW VIOLATIONS TODAY

Judge Bell hustled a trio of "run of the mine" bootleggers into "the gob" at a post-Christmas session of sentence court this morning.

The first pair called were Felix Mackey and Henry Anderson, who had entered pleas of guilty to violation of the liquor law. In moving for sentence District Attorney Arnold styled Mackey and Anderson as just common ordinary "run of the mine" bootleggers, stating they had already spent some time in the hock-gow.

Moved by the yuletide spirit Judge Bell thereupon directed that each of the pair pay $100 fine and the costs in his case and be dumped in "the gob" for a period of 80 days. However, as they had already served more than that time he arranged a parole and gave them until the first Monday of May to pay fine and costs.

William Collins, who hails from Falls Creek, and who had a "sprag" put in his business by Federal District Head Sprague a little more than two weeks ago, was also called for sentence upon his admission of guilt. The District Attorney said two cases and two and one-half gallons of liquor had been found in Collins' possession. Collins claimed one of the stills as a family heirloom from the bogs of Connought, while the other he said had been a present. Collins was described as a troubadour, a homeopathic chemist and taking that fact into consideration Judge Bell sentenced Collins to pay $100 fine and costs and spend four months in jail, with the condition that upon payment of fine and costs within 30 days a parole from further jail sentence might be asked for.

The remainder of the list of twenty-five liquor law violators to acknowledge their shortcomings by plea of guilty or who were convicted at December criminal court will be disposed of tomorrow.

BELLAIRE, OHIO

Bellaire, O., Dec. 27.—A mother and two children burned to death in their beds here today.

Mrs. Wm. Aiken, aged 37, her son Junior, aged 10, and Arthur, aged 8, died in the flames. An infant son is in a hospital suffering from burns.

The baby was saved by neighbors whose efforts to save the others were hindered by the volume of flames which cut off entrance to the house.

DEFECTIVE WIRING
CAUSES FIRE IN
RHONE RESIDENCE

The fire alarm sounded about 10:45 o'clock this morning for a fire in District No. 36. The flames located the blaze at the home of John Rhone on Merrill street, where an electric wire in the pantry was found to be burning. The applicator of a small dose of chemical soda put the fire out of business and the excitement was over.

The Rhone home is quarantined for diphtheria and the firemen did not linger long about the premises.

EGG EXHIBIT AT BIG FARM SHOW IS BOUND TO ATTRACT

The egg exhibit that has been planned in connection with the State Farm Products Show at Harrisburg, January 23 to 26, will embody a valuable lesson for Clearfield County farmers and poultrymen.

The principal aim of the exhibit this year will be to create a greater appreciation of the market demands, and to demonstrate the various methods of handling and packing eggs.

Too often, Pennsylvania farmers ignore the dollars-and-cents value of a product that is strictly uniform as to color, size and quality. It puzzles a great many of our poultrymen to explain how it is that California eggs, produced on the coast two or three weeks ago, and taking a week in transit, can appear on our eastern markets tomorrow and command a higher price than the Pennsylvania product. It is not the fault of the Pennsylvania hen. Neither is it because the California hen lays a better egg than our own birds, nor that the California farmer has a "pull" with our eastern dealers. It is the blame of the farmer who continues to send his eggs to market ungraded, with small and large eggs, brown and white eggs, all in the same basket. The secret, if it may be so called, of the California system is that they ship a clean, uniform product, in neat, clean containers.

Some of our Clearfield county farmers will be interested in sending an exhibit in to the egg show. Further information will be gladly furnished by the Poultry Extension Department at State College, Pa., or the Secretary of Agriculture, at Harrisburg. To those who have the best displays in the exhibit, cash premiums and ribbons will be awarded.

TEACHERS WANT TO HOLD INSTITUTE EARLIER IN YEAR

Advocates Election
of Teachers Earlier In
Year and Make Other
Worthy Suggestions.

COVER BIG FIELD

The teachers of Clearfield County assembled here last week passed a constructive set of resolutions which it is our privilege to publish. They advocate:

The holding of the institute during the first week of September.

That the secretaries of school boards, furnish the County Superintendent with a list of teachers elected before the first of August.

That the legislature rectify the salary increment provision in the school code so that fourth class districts will share equally.

A uniform selective course of study.

A tenure of office policy for school teachers.

Electing of teachers for the following year as soon after January first as possible.

Granting assistance from the state in the maintenance of rural school buildings and the publication in newspapers of the so-called Kaiser's Message and of any writing coming from the German royal family, styling them falsehoods which may contaminate American youth.

Also commend the Department of Education for its progressive steps in raising the standards of the schools in Pennsylvania.

RESOLVED—1. That it is the sense of this Institute that the Clearfield County Institute should be held during the week of the Monday nearest the first of September, and we regret that the resolution of the Institute last year on this subject was not complied with by those in authority.

2. That we very respectfully request the secretaries of school boards (Continued on Page Two)

THEATRE FIRE AT ERIE CAUSES LOSS OF OVER $100,000

Erie, Pa., Dec. 28.—After a desperate battle lasting five hours, Erie firemen at 8:30 a. m. today had under control a fire that threatened for a time to destroy an entire business block at Peach and 18th streets, close to the center of the city.

The Erie Theatre, a motion picture house, and the piano store of Helen Shaffer, adjoining, were destroyed, and the Buck building was badly damaged. The total loss was estimated at $100,000.

The Erie Theatre building was a two-story brick structure only recently completed.

The fire broke out in the theatre about three o'clock this morning. An investigation is being made in connection with reports that the fire was caused by the explosion of motion picture films. The entire fire department was called out to fight the flames.

Fireman Joseph Rose was badly but not seriously hurt when a floor collapsed beneath him and he fell to the floor below.

JOHNSON, OLD PAL OF BORAH TO LEAD FIGHT AGAINST HIM

Washington, Dec. 28.—Senator Hiram Johnson, new leader of the Senate irreconcilables, was to sponsor for the action today against Senator Borah's proposal for an invitation to the world to bring its economic problems to America for settlement.

Johnson, in a speech, was expected to brand the Borah plan as a long step in the direction of American membership in the League of Nations, or if not, for a permanent entanglement in European affairs.

Johnson and other irreconcilables who were closely associated with Borah in the Versailles treaty fight have broken with him on his new proposal so that the Idaho Senator now faces opposition from both regular G. O. P. and his old irreconcilable friends.

Washington, Dec. 28.—President Harding today announced his opposition to the passing by the Senate of the Borah resolution requesting the Executive to call an International Economic Armament Limitation conference.

The President declared that the passing of the Borah resolution was undesirable "because of the false impressions which may be conveyed to Europe and have been made undesirable by the impressions already conveyed to Americans." His position was revealed in a letter to Senator Lodge, Acting Senate Leader in the Senate.

It would be futile to call such a conference as proposed by Borah until the Executive had learned that such a move would be welcome by the other nations, Mr. Harding said.

BRITISH WAR FLEET ORDERED TO RETURN TO CONSTANTINOPLE

London, Dec. 28.—A fleet of British war ships that left Constantinople last week has been ordered to return there immediately as a consequence of the Turkish attitude at Lausanne, according to advices received here today.

The fleet, under Admiral P., will sail from Malta this afternoon, it was said.

London Dec. 28.—Britain rushed a fleet to Constantinople "to influence the Turks toward peace." The Admiralty announced that Admiral Broke's squadron was steaming from Malta the British Naval Base in the Mediterranean full speed for Constantinople.

TURKS ADAMANT IN REFUSAL TO GIVE UP MOSUL OIL FIELD

Lausanne, Dec. 28.—Turks today threatened a break-down of the Lausanne Conference to giving up the rich Mosul oil lands to Great Britain.

In face of threats by Marquis Curzon, British Foreign Minister, that the conference will reach a breaking point within a week unless the Turks capitulate on half a dozen points, Ismet Pasha, armed with orders from Ankara, refused to give way.

The Ankara Assembly severely rebuked its delegate for his conciliatory assertions and warned him not to sign any treaty until it is approved by the Assembly itself.

CLEARFIELD F. O. E. TO BRING A NOTED SPEAKER HERE WED.

Judge O'Donnell, From
Kansas City, Will Tell
Aims of the Lodge at
Big Public Meeting.

YOU ARE INVITED

Next Wednesday evening, January 3, Clearfield Aerie Fraternal Order of Eagles will hold a public meeting in the Globe Theatre. The purpose of the meeting is largely to inform the public regarding the aims, principles and past achievements of the Order. Specifically the meeting can be said to be for purpose of furthering the Old Age Pension movement and new membership activities.

The orator of the evening will be Judge O'Donnell of Kansas City, Mo., one of the best platform speakers before the public today. Judge O'Donnell has been in active work in behalf of the Old Age Pension law for some time and has the subject well in hand. He has traveled all over the country in this behalf and will present the subject in such light that even the most skeptical will at least be impressed.

When it is remembered that the Fraternal Order of Eagles is only twenty-five years old as an organization; that its membership will soon reach the million mark; that during the past year over 42,000 new members were enrolled; the stability, strength, service and great worth of this Order will be appreciated.

Up to the present year the Fraternal Order of Eagles has paid out over twenty-four million dollars for sick benefits funeral benefits and medical service. It has paid to the families of soldiers who gave up their lives in the World War over sixteen hundred thousand dollars and is still paying to the wives orphans and parents of World War victims who are passing away from the wounds or injuries received in that gigantic struggle.

Everybody is invited to attend the meeting next Wednesday evening. It will be free and all will be welcome. Judge O'Donnell will prove a most popular speaker and all will be pleased to hear him and his message.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAM NOSED COLLEGIANS OUT OF A VICTORY

In the fastest and tightest game of the season to date, Clearfield High's stalwart passers succeeded in nosing out the College Five, 37 to 36, an extra five-minute period being necessary to settle the issue. It was a game of thrills, fast passing and in spots rather rough. The fair sized crowd that witnessed the contest was treated to some real play, for from the initial toss-up 'till the final whistle, not more than two baskets separated the two teams at any time.

The score at half time stood 11 to 11, and the close of the regular final session found the count again even at 30 each. In the extra period the Red and Black floor men garnered 7 points, while the college boys failed by a point to tie it up again.

Not much can be said of the game as to detail. It was just a good, clean and hotly contested clash, in which the high schoolers upset the dope by winning. To defeat such a galaxy of stars at "Bill" Ammerman, Duane Keefe, Eddie Butler, Lawrence Howe and Flegall, who represent some of the best basket ball men turned out by C. H. S. in recent years, was a thing the shrews dooped into side. However, the local High students were able to play a wonderful defensive game, considering who their opponents were, and incidentally (Continued on Page 4).

Mrs. Leavy was a fine type of Christian womanhood, a devoted and devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal church from girlhood, she practiced the splendid teachings of her church throughout her daily life. She was intensely devoted to her family and never was so happy as when something cut the rough places from the feet of her loved ones while living with them and surrounding them with all the love and comforts a doting mother's heart could devise and her death is indeed a sad blow to her loved ones.

She is survived by her mother Mrs. Anna Gulich Hensley, now well over the one hundred year mark, her sister, Miss Alice Hensley, of McKeessport, Pa., and two daughters, Mrs. Don Ginery and Miss Sarah Leavy.

Judge Bell's "sentence court" attracted a gallery of several hundred spectators to the court room this morning where the bootleggers, moonshiners and other liquor law violators, together with those malefactors convicted of various degrees of crimes at the December criminal court were scheduled for final disposition, with its application of the punishment to fit the crime, as old "Pooh Bah" used to require in the comic opera "Mikado."

Stoneville Agent Promises to Quit.

The court bell rang at 10 o'clock and Judge Bell took his seat on the bench about 15 minutes later. The first defendant called for sentence by District Attorney Arnold was Scott Hess of Stoneville who made a sale of two to a couple of Federal dry officers under the direction of Division Head Sprague of Punxsutawney.

A. M. Lisenright, Esq., appeared for Hess and made a plea for leniency, stating his client was not an old offender and would not again engage in the business if allowed his liberty. District Attorney Arnold then stated Hess represented a sort of syndicate, they believed, but that he steadfastly refused to give any information regarding his source of supply. He was then sentenced to pay $100 fine and costs and three months with parole on payment of fine and costs in 30 days.

Woman Had Still—30 Days.

Mrs. Sterneske, of Beccaria township, who was also arrested by the Federal officers, had a still operating in her cellar and sold the officers a half pint of alcohol. The defendant who is 60 years of age, was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs and 30 days in jail.

Good Reputation Saves Ianaro.

Joseph Ianaro, of Clearfield, was next called. He entered a plea of guilty after the Commonwealth had shown several sales at the Ianaro home in East End. The sales had been made by Mrs. Ianaro, but the husband entered a plea of guilty on condition that a nolle pro's would be entered as to his wife, which plea was accepted by the court. A. H. Woodward and A. Roy Chase appeared for the defendant, the former making a strong plea for his client asserting that he was led to fall by reason of his financial condition and circumstances, but said he had sold

Edgar Meize of Clearfield, who was convicted of purchasing liquor for Ephraim Leach, was called and after some friendly advice from Judge Bell his case was postponed until the first Monday of February the Judge stating he believed that to be the best solution of the matter. He pays the costs by that time and properly conducts himself meanwhile further sentence will be suspended.

Prompt Payment Wins Release.

Owen Smeal, of Ironsboro, who was found with a quart of whiskey in his car following a collision and who entered a plea of guilty to transporting liquor, was held up or taken up (Continued on Page 2).

Heavy Petition Is Filed To Save Ed. Bywater And Woman

London, Dec. 28.—The appeal of Frederick Edward Bywaters, twenty-year-old naval steward, again sentenced to death for the murder of his sweetheart's husband, went to the Home Secretary today backed by a monster petition, containing more than one billion signatures. Two automobile trucks were required to carry the latter.

Bywaters was sentenced jointly with Mrs. Edith Thompson, eight years his senior, for the murder of her husband October 4. She is soon to become a mother.

The Lord Chief Justice refused to consider a joint appeal for clemency earlier in the month and the couple will be hanged together in the Penitentiary jail unless Bywater's appeal is successful.

Harry Rhine, of Gettysburg is the guest of his brother Charles M. Rhine at present.

all told but twenty gallons of liquor and thought his previous good record and reputation should move the Court to leniency in this case, especially so as the defendant had nine small children to support.

District Attorney Arnold disagreed with Attorney Woodward as to amount of sales, stating that he had had many complaints regarding same during all the summer. Judge Bell then said he agreed with what had been said about the defendant's previous good record, which he knew and said that he with greatly surprised to hear of these violations of the liquor law. He then sentenced him to pay $100 fine and costs and undergo eight months imprisonment in the county jail, with privilege of applying for a parole after four months.

Constable Gets the Belt.

A. C. Edwards, the head tax driver and erstwhile constable of the Third Ward, was then called. District Attorney Arnold referred to the sale extent of the defendant's business, stating same had diminished from the first of the year down to the present. Attorneys W. A. Hagerly and A. Roy Chase interceded for Edwards.

Judge Bell then said this was a decidedly unpleasant case for him, knowing the defendant as he did, up was evidenced by his appointment to the position of constable. He said the prisoner possessed higher intelligence than the average violator and was personally likable. He then sentenced him to pay $100 fine and undergo imprisonment in the county jail for a period of twelve months, with the privilege of applying for a parole at the end of six months.

Given a Lecture.

Edgar Meize of Clearfield, who was convicted of purchasing liquor for Ephraim Leach, was called and after some friendly advice from Judge Bell his case was postponed until the first Monday of February the Judge stating he believed that to be the best solution of the matter. He pays the costs by that time and properly conducts himself meanwhile further sentence will be suspended.

BOUNTY SEASON IS ON AND STATE IS PAYING BIG SUMS

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 28. (U. P.)—The regular winter bounty season beginning with this month is showing a number of bounty claims equal to last years record according to game officials here. Though bounties are paid on varmints killed at any season of the year by far the greatest amount is killed during December, January and February.

Most of the bounties are claimed by persons living in the rural districts of the State, principally farmers who having less to do during the winter months devote more of their attention to trapping and killing animals on which the State pays a bounty.

Since the beginning of the present bounty system in 1918 the State has paid $912,777 in bounties.

During the last year, Dec. 1921 to Dec. 1922—bounties amounting to $121,819.56 were paid it was announced today. This amount is not (Continued on Page 2).

to furnish a certified list of teachers to the county superintendent before the first of August of each year in order that he may have an authentic mailing list for an earlier institute.

3. That we very respectfully petition the Department of Education and the Legislature to make the increment in salary uniform throughout the state so that fourth class districts are not discriminated against.

4. In that all reputable institutions of learning publish a course of study that prospective students may know what to select and where they will land at the end of four years, we very respectfully petition the Department of Education to publish a course of study for school teachers of the Commonwealth so that summer after summer they may intelligently pursue the course to a definite end.

5. That we favor a tenure of office policy in the teaching profession in order that there may be more stability and permanency in carrying on the work of the schools, and that we furthermore ask the school directors of this county to elect the school teachers for the term of 1923-24 as soon after January as possible. The reasons for this resolution are self-evident and argument is not needed.

6. That we urge our representatives in the Pennsylvania State Legislature to give us greater assistance in financing the Public School activities of the State to the end that school boards may receive their appropriations promptly in order that embarrassments may be relieved and a better and more confident spirit may be nurtured. That the Public Schools should have larger appropriations, and that State College, the pride of our Commonwealth, may not go begging among the school teachers and school children for financial aid.

7. That we deplore the prominence given to the Ex-Emperor of Germany by the American News Papers and Magazines in publishing and advertising his writings on the World War. These lies thrust upon the American people, read by many and believed by some, have greatly enriched the Kaiser's purse and correspondingly made us poorer, not only in money but in American ideals. The only information that should interest us about such monsters and monstrosities is their everlasting internment in tombs, which appear not, and the men that walk over them know it not. Such blasted lies that appear in his biography can do no good and might prove to be fares, in the minds of the American youth.

8. That we commend the Department of Education for its progressive steps in raising the standards of the schools of this Commonwealth that better teachers and better pay go hand in hand; that Dr. Finnegan deserves the commendation of every school teacher in Pennsylvania.

9. That we extend to Supt. W. E. Trostle our sincere thanks and appreciation for providing the splendid program for this institute, and for his untiring efforts in behalf of the best interests of the schools of Clearfield County.

10. That we thank the Clearfield Board of Education for the use of its splendid auditorium in the high school building for our institute; that we thank the Janitors for the efficient services in keeping us warm and comfortable; that we thank the Ministers of the Gospel for their time and services in opening our institute; that we thank Supt. Geo. E. Zerfoss and Prof. Kopp, of the Clearfield schools for the many courtesies extended to us and the perennial welcome which emanated from their day after day.

Driving Comfort in Winter The Buick "Model 45" Six Cylinder-$1195

As complete as has been the development of the enclosed car, Buick designers have not neglected to improve the open type of car, building into it a measure of comfort, convenience and weather protection surpassed only by the more expensive closed vehicles.

Protection against wind and snow is assured by the snug-fitting storm curtains that open with the doors. The Buick design of storm curtains with a special weather strip provides a coziness, comparable to that of any closed car, while windshield wiper and tight fitting windshield, adjustable from within, make driving safe and comfortable.

Aided to this, and equally important in winter driving, is the improved performance that a Buick car always produces-its constant and surplus power-its roadability and perfect balance as a life unquestioned dependability.

For cold weather driving there is no superior to the Buick open cars.

Mrs. Lida Wrigley, whose home in Chester county, accompanied her two sons, is visiting her mother Mr. Jason Spencer near Edgeport. The Spencer family had planned a family reunion Christmas dinner but owing to illness in the Richards family at Grampian, the event had to be postponed until a future date.

Tom Sheridan spent a few days with his brothers, James and Walter, the latter part of last week.

Stanley Kujawa, working in Pittsburgh can't home Monday for a family Xmas dinner with his parents Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kujawa.

George Killeberger, Jr., returned home Tuesday from a week's jaunt in and around Johnstown and Pittsburgh. While in the Smoky City he was doing some work along the line of American Legion interests.

Mr. and Mrs. William Twigg, Huntington avenue, enjoyed a family dinner with friends at Sandy Ridge on Monday. Mrs. Twigg remained over there and will visit among old friends for the balance of the week.

Lawrence Volpe is nursing a wounded finger, caused by it coming in contact with a sharp piece of wire.

Died at her home in Altoona on Monday evening, after a ten day illness of pneumonia, Cora C. Raybold, wife of John C. Raybold, superintendent of the Altoona Gas Company.

Deceased was the third daughter of James and Martha A. Norris and was born on the farm now occupied by Atlee Norris in Pike township on August 26th, 1873; hence at date of demise was aged 49 years, 3 months and 26 days. She received a common school education, and then learned the printing trade, under tutelage of R. H. Brainard, of the Review. About the year 1892, she was united in marriage with John C. Raybold, taking up their residence at Grampian, where Mr. Raybold was employed as station agent for the Penna Railroad Company.

After a residence in that town for several years, the family came to Curwensville and a few years later to Clearfield and thence to Altoona. She was a member of the M. E. church of this place. Surviving her are her husband and one son; the mother, Mrs. Martha Norris, brothers C. O. Norris, this place; Atley Foster and Veigh, of Pike township; Mrs. Hoover, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Henry Hile, Mrs. Venie Miller and Miss Jean Norris of this place. Funeral services will be held from her late home in Altoona on Wednesday afternoon. The body will be brought to the home of C. O. Norris on noon Penna train Thursday and lay in state, where friends can view body until 1:30 p. m. after which a short funeral service will be held by Rev. Dr. Collins. Interment in Oak Hill cemetery.

Monday, Christmas Day, proved an ideal one, the sun shining out brightly making the atmosphere warm and pleasant outside. The day opened by a treat at the Moose home to the children. A thousand pounds of candy, hundreds of oranges, and barrels of nuts were handed out by "Barney" Ayers, who played the role of Santa Claus. The bright and happy faces of the kiddies must have carried Santa back to his boyhood days, for he was not a darn bit stingy about scattering his gifts about. It was a great time for the little ones and a Christmas day that will long remain in the memory of all those who were present. Not only were the little ones made glad but during Sunday evening and Monday forenoon more than half a hundred baskets containing a chicken and other eatables for a good dinner were left at homes of the needy. The members of the Loyal Order of Moose of Curwensville did not go half way in spreading broadcast Christmas cheer this year, for the writer incidentally learned that over three hundred dollars was expended in this work. Had it not been for the efforts made by this organization the kiddies would have been minus their usual public treat. Years have come and gone, they have multiplied into decades and scores mayhap, yet each has echoed the anniversary anthem, "Peace on earth, good will to men." That song said to the heart—BE GLAD; and with a philosophy truly human we had a demonstration of the saying on Monday morning in front of the Moose home on north Filbert street. Once again, as a common brotherhood, we greeted each other on the anniversary of the birth of the God-man. He who taught the world this most beautiful, most pure, most noble philosophy—a philosophy all may rest upon. May the new year, which is fast approaching, bring to all readers of The Progress and others too, health, wealth and happiness, is the sincere wish of the Curwensville correspondent.

The Methodist Sabbath school held no particular exercises on Sunday morning, but the pupils of the infant departments were remembered by each receiving a small box of choice candy.

Midnight mass was held in St. Timothy Catholic church Sunday. The edifice was beautifully decorated for the occasion and the singing was of such a character that it brought peace and cheer into the hearts of all.

The Presbyterian church held its services on Sabbath evening, consisting of songs and recitations, at the conclusion of which the usual gifts and remembrances were distributed.

Christmas exercises took place in Grace Lutheran church on Sunday evening. This Sabbath school had prepared and executed a lengthy and interesting program. The participants certainly did themselves honor in the manner their particular parts were performed. One of the pleasing numbers on the program was the singing of little Gertrude Erhard.

At the Baptist church on Monday evening a pleasing exercise was rendered which was indeed a credit to those who had it in charge, at the conclusion of which the school children were compensated by receiving a usual Christmas treat of candy, nuts, etc.

A year has been rung into the past by fleeting time. An experience novel enough for a romance yet prosaic enough for a treatise has been ours in the interim, for "many men of many minds" have been met, studied and written of, and almost every kind of local industry or pursuit has received mention at our hand. Scores of marriages have been chronicled, and alas, many, many deaths. Accidents, fires, family reunions, history and speculation, politics and religion the fruits of thoughtful research and comment 'al'abandon, all these and more—such has been the field of the Curwensville correspondent's letters to The Progress' work. Scores of people who have read our battling with life have gone beyond yet we are still permitted to survive and go on with our work. Others have married, gone in or out of business, been maimed, crippled, or afflicted, visited by fire, fortune or disaster, made happy by fortuitous conditions or rendered miserable by the trials of adversities innumerable. Some have reached, perhaps, every projected desire and now view with joyous elation, the prospects of the morrow, while others ask if the new year be really worth living, and if life itself is not a farce. The Progress writer who lives with the people and learns of them, reads of them, and writes of them sees all of these things. The great pulse of human life stirs him, moves him and moulds him—yet his individuality must remain. We must censure and praise, and be censured and praised, and his trials are naught to the public while the public is an all to him. In Curwensville alone there are probably five or six hundred persons who peruse the columns of the Progress daily. We cannot greet them all a year hence, for many will be recorded in the record of "Deaths." The recorder himself may be there written of by other hand than that now guiding the pencil. These things are veiled from us. It is well Peace—gentle, soothing, placating peace—rest upon us all during the year 1923. May good will, thy necessary servant, pervade this community and the whole earth. In closing we wish to thank one and all who have contributed in any way to the success of the Curwensville letter.

HOW TO KEEP YOUR BABY WELL

A Weekly Talk To Mothers Issued Through The Babies' Prophylactic Clinic, Henry Phipps Institution, 7th and Lombard Streets.

Make Believe
Children live in a world of their own. You never can be really sure of what a child is thinking, or how his little mind is working.

When a child is two years old until he is about six or seven, he imagines all sorts of things. He begins to know a large number of objects and persons and names and arranges them in many different combinations to suit his own childish fancies.

These fancies or day dreams are but imagination. All of us need imagination, but some of us have less of it than others. We need it to put ourselves in the other fellow's place. It develops the quality of sympathy. Then, too, imagination is of practical importance, particularly to a child, because it is a help in learning. The child who thinks he is a dog or cat will watch those animals very closely in order to imitate them, and so unconsciously takes note of their ways and habits.

Your child's world of make-believe is very real to him. If he is playing a role, you must try to enter into the game with him. Should Mary be a princess for the time being, she will resent a presumptuous command to come to dinner, but will appear quickly enough when she is summoned like this "Will the princess kindly lead the way to the dining room?"

You will find the imaginative boy or girl much easier to amuse than the one with little imagination. He will not constantly be asking, "What shall I do?" He will invent his own games.

Normal children do not need elaborate toys to make them happy. Two or three empty boxes held together with a string and decorated with a smoke stack of an unpainted pencil will make an adequate train for your little ones.

Encourage your child's imagination. Let him hear about fairies and Santa Claus and enjoy those things that will give him his own little Kingdom of Make-Believe.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY

The Christmas festival was most appropriately celebrated at St. John's church at all the services on Sunday last. The Sunday School had special music and several classes emphasized the spirit of the day by presenting gifts worthy of mention. Class No. 11 thru their committee gave two loads of coal to needy families and two $10.00 coupon books for groceries to others. Class No. 3 presented their teacher Mr. E. O. Tobias with a beautiful silk umbrella and remembered the pastor with a similar gift. This class also gave a $10.00 coupon book to a worthy family. The Sunday School as a whole presented the pastor with a fine silver communion service.

The special service for the day was held at 7:30 in the evening when "White Gifts for the King's Birthday" a beautiful Christmas Play was given with all its symbolic significance before a large congregation. The cast of characters was made up of the following: King Mr. Harry Carlson; Herald, Miss Salome Davis; Interpreter, Mr. Paul Dietzel; Men Givers, R. L. Cathcart; Richard Emmig, W. E. Davis, George Mann; Woman Giver Mrs. Irvine Miller; Child Giver, Laura Dietzel; King's attendants, Mrs. Harry McIlvain, Mrs. R. L. Cathcart and Mr. Guy Barger. White Gifts of service, self and substance were solicited. Of "substance" there was contributed $160.00 which will be shared between Russian Relief and Ministerial Relief.

At the close of the service the service the pastor Rev. Hauser, read a special communication which was handed him and advised him of the fact that the congregation in appreciation of his services had unanimously granted an increase of $200.00 to his salary dating from November 1, 1922. It was a fitting culmination to a wonderful display of Christlike giving and highly significant of the feeling of this congregation for their earnest hard-working leader.

These reveals instinctive medical knowledge. For Dr. Eugene Lynam Fisk, who furnishes this table thru the Life Extension Institute, emphasizes, "Beware of underweight. It is obvious, however, that if a person takes sufficient food, exercise and rest, has a good color and is otherwise healthy, he need not worry if he is somewhat under weight according to compiled tables, especially if he be of light framework."

In the last analysis, weight is a condition of the body's endocrine glands.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Here is the amazing, the very, experience of Robert T. Lincoln, son of President Lincoln, and now in his 80th year. He related it recently to a friend and, so far as I know, it has never before been published: Young Lincoln was in the army and stationed in Virginia when he received an order to report at Washington. He got into the theatre just in time to see his father receive his fatal wound. Young Lincoln was Secretary of War under Garfield. He was asked by the President to meet him at the station and he reached there just as Garfield was assassinated.

Mr. Lincoln received an invitation to attend the formal opening of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, and accompanied by his family, got there just in time to see President McKinley shot by Czolgoz.

A friend happened to be with Mr. Lincoln when he received an invitation to attend a Presidential function at Washington a few years ago. He then remarked something to the effect that, "If they only knew, they wouldn't want me there." And he recited his experience as here re-related.—B. C. Forbes, in Forbes Magazine.

We hear all manner of suggestions or proposed changes in the deer law at the coming session of the Pennsylvania legislature, so we hasten to turn in with ours, while the "horning" is good. If we must have a change in the deer law why not eliminate the shooting of "spike" bucks and cut the camp limit from six down to four bucks. With a smaller camp limit, the hunter could afford to spend some time looking them over. Let the deer alone; they are hunting no one.

How much do you weigh? Are you above or below what you should be, considering your height? Here's a table showing what you should weigh, to have an ideal build at the age of 30:

Weight, of course, varies with age. The youth who grows too fast often is built like a pencil when he "reaches his growth" although he threatens to eat his father out of house and home.

At 30 most of us have blossomed fully into maturity of height and weight. Hence the above table shows ideal weights at 30.

A person progressing through middle age will remain about the same weight as at 30 if he or she keeps in good physical trim. Bay windows and other additions to our architecture betray physical neglect. Few of us can resist, stepping on a pair of scales whenever we pass one, especially if there's a "free" sign. And, unless we are under-sized, most of us are highly pleased if we have taken on a pound or so. We reason that, if we aren't losing flesh, things must be all right with us.

This reveals instinctive medical knowledge. For Dr. Eugene Lynam Fisk, who furnishes this table thru the Life Extension Institute, emphasizes, "Beware of underweight. It is obvious, however, that if a person takes sufficient food, exercise and rest, has a good color and is otherwise healthy, he need not worry if he is somewhat under weight according to compiled tables, especially if he be of light framework."

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

RUGAL or unthinking local householders are responsible for several recent fires in this community according to an electrical expert connected with the Underwriters' Association of Pennsylvania, who was called here to investigate some recent fires. According to this expert the householder when a fuse plug was burned out or destroyed, to save the trouble or the five or six cents necessary to replace the fuse plug the "home spun" electrician would insert a penny back of the useless plug and screw same tight against the coin, which would then act as a buffer or bumper, so to speak, and prevent a blow out. It worked like a charm so far as holding the "juice" in less than operation, but when resistance or a flash came something had to give way and a weak place in the insulation did the rest—and the services of the firemen were next in order. When a fuse plug "shoots," replace it with a new one—save your pennies we mean it literally.

The people of the registration district of which Clearfield is a part cannot be blamed with fostering "race suicide" to any great extent as the records in State Registrar W. A. Hagerly's office show that thus far during 1922 there were 269 deaths and 569 births for the district, which is composed of Clearfield and Wallacetown boroughs, Lawrence, Bradford, Doggs, Goshen and Girard townships.

Charges of extravagance in the administration of the state's educational system made against Dr. Thomas S. Finegan, superintendent of public instruction, are denied in the fourth section of the survey of Pennsylvania's fiscal policies in the field of education. The fourth section of the report, made by Dr. Harlan Updegraff of the University of Pennsylvania, was presented Tuesday to Dr. Clyde L. King, chairman of the Finance Committee appointed to investigate the finances of the Commonwealth.

For months before the recent election Dr. Finegan and his educational policies were targets for all sorts of charges of extravagance, mismanagement, extravagance, cantism, and general abuse. In the recent campaign John A. McSparran, Democratic nominee for Governor, made an issue of what had come to be known as "Fineganism" and charged Clifford Pinchot was committed to "Fineganism" in the schools.

This section of the report, in part, follows and should be carefully read by all interested in our schools: "The State Departments of Public Instruction of other states increased their personnel more rapidly than did that of Pennsylvania during the fifteen years preceding 1920.

"The number of staff officers now in the State Department of Public Instruction in Pennsylvania in proportion to the number of pupils enrolled in the public schools is near the average for eleven representative states.

"While the salaries paid these staff officers are higher than in other states, they are no higher than was necessary to obtain the services of the individuals employed. The fact that these officers are not permitted to take fees for services in Pennsylvania or to accept contracts for writing books should be taken into account in this connection. Also the fact that in other states the salaries are frequently fixed by statute and are lower than they should be in order to secure persons of the highest efficiency.

Pay No Higher Than Necessary. "Salaries are no higher than are necessary to obtain and hold men and women of high qualifications. Twelve per cent of the staff have left to accept positions elsewhere under conditions that would give them larger financial returns than in the State Department of Public Instruction.

"The expenses of the Department per pupil enrolled in the state and the per capita of population in the state are not quite so high as the average furnished by eleven representative northern states.

"The bureau has been, on the whole, conducted in an efficient manner. It is believed that the data presented relative to the number of schools visited, conferences held, addresses given, letters written, syllabi prepared, hours per day spent at work, etc., when considered in connection with the high qualifications of the staff clearly indicate that the state has received full return for the money expended.

Liquor Law Violators

der advisement until the first Monday of February and disposition at that time will depend upon the defendant's conduct during the coming month. He was told to pay the costs in the meantime and promptly pulled a roll of bills from his pocket, saying "I'll just pay them now," which he did.

Joe Yowasky, violation of liquor law, sentenced to pay costs within 30 days.

Interested Drivers Up. Casimir Rokosky, of West Liberty, who entered a plea of guilty to operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, was sentenced to pay $100 fine and costs and serve 10 days in jail.

Robert Bailay, of DuBois, formerly of Armstrong county, who entered a similar plea, was sentenced to pay $100 fine and costs, but as he had already served 14 days in jail, no further sentence was imposed, the fine and costs to be paid within ten days.

Jacob Maines, of Bradford, who entered a plea of guilty to a bootlegging charge, having served a sentence of 30 days in jail, was given six months in which to pay the $100 fine and costs imposed.

Leslie J. Wise, the West Side pool room proprietor, was given until the first Monday of March to get out of the business at that point. He had entered a plea to a charge of allowing gambling in his place.

Meade Graham—Continued to first Monday of February, 1923 pending physical examination to be made by Dr. John W. Gordon. Case may be disposed of prior to that time if the Commonwealth decides after due notice to the defendant.

Abram McKee, the Kerrtown man, who was convicted of involuntary manslaughter for the killing of R. H. Tubbs, a fellow railway section hand whom he hit on the head with a shovel during an altercation between the men. In imposing sentence, Judge Bell said it was the most distressing case to come before him during his term, inasmuch as it was from his home community and he knew the principals. He said the verdict was a just one under all the circumstances. Said it was the lowest degree of voluntary manslaughter and the highest of involuntary manslaughter. He was then sentenced to pay $1.00 fine and costs and serve two years in county jail with privilege to apply for a parole after fifteen months. The defendant was given until next Wednesday to arrange his affairs and begin his sentence.

HOW TO FORGET
TROUBLES

TROUBLES knock up your system like a fast runner knock down his opponent.

Troubles deal blows both in the head and stomach—and they hurt the stomach more than they do the head!

Troubles give the stomach indigestion, slow up the liver—and then follow constipation and biliousness.

The way to get rid of troubles is to invigorate digestion, stimulate liver and bowels and tone up the entire system. The best way to do this—has been for the past 20 years—is to take Searles' Pink Pills.

Then you will feel so good that troubles become merely guests, to be dismissed easily by the clear, keen brain of health.

THE BENEVOLENT TYRANT!

Americans are said to be busy people. The hurrying crowds of city streets are unique in this country; those who read foreign streets do go in more leisurely fashion. Yet it is an English writer who observes anxiously, "There are people in the world of whom it may be truly said that they never rest—who never read and never think, but who spend their time in moving from place to place and in talking." Is it of English folk that he speaks? The description fits accurately near at home.

Certainly, restlessness becomes a habit, and there are no people more restless than Americans. As Mr. Young, the English writer, goes on to state, some persons continually insist that they will go to this place and that "for a rest," and arrive invariably at that end; only to find themselves looking forward from this resting place to another quite as un-restful as the first.

Follow the mind cures, the thought healing, the self-analysis, to which these people find plenty of time to devote. The cause of this sort of national "busyness" apparently lies in a lack of individual goal. Life is lived not as a unit, but as a day-to-day affair. A worthwhile life cannot be lived without reflection. Mind cures may or may not make opportunity for this a possibility. A much easier way is for each person to realize that he needs time to think, and then for him to take that time.

Many do not understand why dealers in beverages continue to ask for a license when we have prohibition laws. A license court is scheduled to be held next month.

The Womans Law did not repeal the License Law and licenses are necessary to sell any drink containing alcohol up to one-half of one per cent.

Many drinks on the market today contain small amounts of alcohol, but to sell these the seller must have a license. Without this license the retailer may be asked to prove that he sells contains no alcohol whatever. With the license he can sell drinks containing this small amount of alcohol.

No licenses were granted by the court last year and the dealer who sells beverages with the least little kick can be prosecuted for selling liquor without a license.

Bootleg whisky, or moonshine, as it is better known, is a much maligned article.

While it is true that it is, in most instances, a poison, and the Prohibition Enforcement Bureau continually calls attention to the dangers of drinking it, those who want a return to what they call "good liquor" join in condemnation of moonshine.

Figures gathered by the news associations of the country indicate that over one hundred deaths were caused in the United States by drinking bootleg whisky, with probably two more cases of blindness.

This is a terrible toll, but we must remember that when we had the so-called "good liquor" nobody went to the trouble of keeping tabs on the deaths from Christmas debauches.

Our memory does not have to be very long to recall a few right in this community.

Today in the editorial cartoon we take our last shot at Bill Hays and Fatty Arbuckle. We make this statement because we feel we have done our part and to discourage the proposed formation of a Scarlet Letter Club among some of our male friends who have much in common with Fatty and are rushing to his defense in mutual sympathy.

The school teachers of Clearfield County, in their resolutions, make several recommendations which should be given consideration, but rural school districts should give particular attention to that advocating earlier election of teachers. The larger school districts always hold their teacher elections early in the year, and while the selections are not always publicly announced, the better and more desirable teachers have been secured and the teacher may go ahead and prepare for the coming year.

Rural school boards have gotten into the habit of hanging back until at the last moment there is a rush for teachers and in the great majority of cases they must take what is left. In many instances they must press into service teachers who are not fitted and who had no intention of following the profession.

It is not fair to the young people who are making teaching their profession to hold them in doubt all summer as to their next year's work.

won their third straight game of the season.

For the collegians, Ammerman was the scoring ace. "Bill," who is a promising member of the State Fresh squad, dropped seven double pointers in. Eddie Butler, the Bucknell athlete, pulled from the field three times, while Johnnie Smith, Kow and Neff scored two field goals each.

For the C. H. S. Hody Johnson netted the ball four times and added eight more points from free tosses. "Sawde" Johnson, the roving guard, dropped in four field goals. "Pete" Barney three, and Mitchell two. Bob Wilson shot four straight fouls when called upon.

Red and Black Show Promise. The High passers have a wealth of good sound material, which should develop into one of the fastest passing combinations since the 1920 championship quintet. Although only one man out of the ten who got in the game for C. H. S. had earned his letter in the floor sport, every lad distinguished himself for his well directed efforts.

Houtzdale High Here Friday. Houtzdale High, with the strongest dwe to represent their town in years, will invade the local gym Friday and try to top the Red and Black. The lads from the southeastern part of this county have a veteran squad and expect to make a strong bid for the "Mountain League" championship.

Lineup:
College Five C. H. S.
Ammerman F Mitchell
Butler F Hod Johnson
Neff C Pierce

Eddie Cantor Says Vaudeville and Cartoonists "Borned" It

Eddie Cantor has discovered the fountainhead of slang. "It's part of it," he modestly announces. "All the peepiest of America's language originates with the vaudeville and the cartoonist."

The Girl On The Edge Of A Cliff

CHAPTER II.

Dorothy, unlike Gilbertine Murray was not to be read at a glance, and her trouble—as not one she chose to share with any one, even with me. I could not but ask, if the varying moods by which I had found myself secretly harrowed had not sprung from a cause for which my persistent love was more to blame than the emptier of her relative. The aversion she had once shown to my attentions had yielded long ago to a shy, but seemingly sincere appreciation of them, culminating today in that safe presence of my hand which had awakened my hopes, and made me forget all the doubts and caprices of a disturbing courtship.

But had I interpreted that strong nervous pressure aright? Had it necessarily meant love. Might it not have sprung from a sudden desperate resolution to accept a devotion which offered her a way out of difficulties especially falling to one of her gentle but letty spirits? Her expression when she caught my look of joy had little of the demure tenderness of a maiden blushing at her first involuntary avowal. There was shrinking in it, but it was the shrinking of a frightened woman, not of an abashed girl. Had I mistaken my darling's feelings? Or had she secretly yielded to another what she had so long denied me and—

"Ah!" said Sinclair at this juncture, "I see that I have roused you at last." "You begin to see what a question of the most serious import is before us, and that this question must be answered before we separate for the night."

"I do," said I. "Then so much is gained. The next point is, how are we to settle our doubts? We can not approach either of these ladies with questions. A girl wretched enough to contemplate suicide would be especially careful to conceal both her misery and its cause. Neither can we order a search made for an object so small that it can be concealed about the person. Yet this jewel must be recovered. Listen Sinclair, I will have a talk with Dorothy, you with Gilbertine. If a secret lurks in either breast our tenderness should find it out."

But before we proceed to such extreme measures, let us make sure that there is no shorter road to the truth. Some one may have seen which of our two girls went back to the library 'till we all came out of it. That would narrow down our inquiry and save one of them, at least, from unnecessary disturbance."

Mrs. Arms rang, our hostess, was in of gaiety and amusements were lacking. As we stepped down to the great hall we heard music from the drawing room and saw that a party was in progress.

"That is good," observed Sinclair. "I shall run less risk of finding the library occupied." "I'll not look and see where they are." It would be a great relief to find them both among the dancing, he said.

I turned toward the drawing room. A young man greeted me as I stepped in. I showed myself. But I was alone. I wanted to catch the glimpse I wanted of the party beyond. On a divan near the center was a lady conversing with two gentlemen. Her back was turned toward me, but I had no difficulty in recognizing Miss Murray. She appeared quite at ease and more than usually cheerful.

Relieved, I hastened back to Sinclair, who was watching me with furtive eyes from between the curtains of the window. As I joined him, a young man, who was to act as usher, sauntered from behind one of the great pillars and, crossing to where the music room door stood open, disappeared behind it. Sinclair seized me by the arm. "Was that Beaton?" he asked. "Certainly, didn't you recognize him?"

He gave me a very strange look. "Does the sight of him recall anything?"

"No."

"You were at the breakfast table yesterday morning?"

"I was."

"Do you remember the dream he related for the delectation of such as would listen?"

Then it was my turn to go white. "You don't mean—" I began.

"I thought at the time that it sounded more like a veritable adventure than a dream; now I am sure that it was such."

"Sinclair! You do not mean that the young girl he professed himself to have surprised one moonlit night standing on the verge of the cliff, with arms upstretched and a distracted air, was a real person?"

"I do. We laughed at the time; he made it seem so tragic and preposterous. I do not feel like laughing now."

"Beaton mentioned no names," I stubbornly protested. "He did not even call the vision he encountered a woman. It was a wraith, you remember, a dream-creature, a creature of his own imagination, born of some tragedy he had read."

"Beaton is a gentleman," was Sinclair's reply. "He did not wish to injure, but to warn the woman for whose benefit he told his tale."

"Warn?"

"He doubtless reasoned in this way if he could make this young and probably sensitive girl realize that she had been seen and her intentions recognized, she would beware of such attempts in the future."

"Good God, Sinclair, don't let us harrow up ourselves unnecessarily! I saw them both, the girls, a moment ago, and nothing in their manner showed that anything was amiss with either of them."

He drew me toward the library. This room was not frequented by the young people at night. Sinclair wished to show me the cabinet where the box had been.

There was a fire in the grate. When the door had closed behind us we found that this came far made all the light there was in the room.

Sinclair drew a deep breath. "Mr. Armstrong must have gone elsewhere to read the evening papers," he remarked.

Sinclair drew me toward a tall cabinet and pointing to a shelf far above our heads, cried:

"No woman could reach that unaided. Gilbertine is tall, but not tall enough for that. I purposely put it high."

I looked about for a stool. There was one just behind Sinclair. I drew his attention to it.

He flushed and gave it a kick then shivered slightly and sat down in a nearby chair. Gilbertine was there, I observed. She was looking at the shelf with a look of intense interest.

"I'll not look and see where they are." It would be a great relief to find them both among the dancing, he said.

I turned toward the drawing room. A young man greeted me as I stepped in. I showed myself. But I was alone. I wanted to catch the glimpse I wanted of the party beyond. taller than Dorothy. This stool might have served Gilbertine if not Dorothy.

I felt a great sympathy for him. After all, his case was more serious than mine. The bishop was coming to marry him the next day.

AUSTRALIA THINKS IT HAS A CRIME WAVE

Sydney. (By Mail to The United Press.)—So accustomed is Australia to having a law-abiding citizenry that a total of 654 persons charged with crime in six months in a city of 800,000—Sydney—is considered a crime wave, and the premier of the state has called a conference to deal with the problem.

It will be proposed that no crime should be made punishable by a jail sentence of less than six months. Although all but 184 of the 654 persons arraigned were convicted or pleaded guilty, it is felt that the judiciary has shown undue leniency in dealing with criminal cases.

Elmer Ray and Miss Margaret Owens entertained the Blue Bird and Victory S. S. classes Christmas evening at their home at Mt. Joy. Delicious refreshments were served and the evening was enjoyed by all.

How to act in an emergency is knowledge of inestimable worth, and this is particularly true of the diseases and ills of the human body. If you suffer with kidney backache, urinary disorders, or any form of kidney trouble, the advice contained in the following statement should add a valuable asset to your store of knowledge. What could be more convincing proof of the efficiency of Doan's Kidney Pills than the statement of a Clearfield citizen who used them and who publicly tells of the benefit derived?

Mrs. C. E. Reed, 205 Clearfield St., Clearfield, says: "I suffered from kidney trouble. There was a severe pain in the small of my back and I had headaches. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they drove away the pains and headaches. I cannot say too much for Doan's as I think they are perfectly wonderful."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy, get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Reed had. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The toll of the storm continued to grow as additional details of its fury came in from ports of the western English coast. The destructiveness was extended far into the ocean battering even the strongest liners, according to officers, the violent rising from the westward.

The United States, Lodge stated has already reduced to something less than proper peace strength. Lodge similarly reviewed the Arms Conference's failure to reach agreements in the submarine and aircraft questions, included in the amendment to the Naval Bill, which the House adopted.

NEW YORK BANKING LEADER SAYS UNITED STATES HAS AMPLE GROUND FOR
SANE OPTIMISM

By FRANCIS H. Sisson
Vice President Guaranty Trust Co.
of New York.

(Written for The United Press.)

It is striking evidence of the great resilience of this nation that, in spite of the serious adverse influences which persisted in 1922, the closing months of the year disclosed a situation in general very materially improved, as compared with conditions 12 months prior.

Since the beginning of 1922 the general level of prices has been advancing and the volume of industrial production has been increasing. There has been marked improvement in the iron and steel industry, which is now employed at about 80 per cent. of capacity. All of the textile industries are now very active and the automobile manufacturers have had a very prosperous year. Unemployment throughout the country has ceased to be a serious problem; in fact, there is a marked shortage of common labor.

After a year of bountiful crops improving prices, and increasing industrial activity, the outlook for the future may be considered distinctly favorable. In any event, the definite basis for continued prosperity now exists, although it must be admitted that the road ahead is by no means free from obscurities and obstructions.

A well sustained volume of foreign trade, for example, is an important element in a satisfactory economic situation in the United States, and there is ample cause for apprehension over the present financial and economic difficulties in Europe, for which a solution is still to be found. A serious reaction would certainly result in America if the great continental markets were thrown into further disorganization.

The Soldier Bonus.
The financial outlook is excellent and gives assurance of ability to support any sound development of business that may be desired. Through the President's veto of the soldiers' bonus bill the nation has for a time being escaped the enormous financial burden which would have been imposed by that legislation, but the effort to secure a blanket distribution of public funds to the soldiers of the late war will undoubtedly be continued and, if successful, would constitute a serious check to hope for reduction of taxation and amortization of the national debt.

A similar menace to the public credit lies in the proposals to weaken the Federal Reserve Board by appointments for political or class purposes in its personnel and to institute special and perhaps unsound extension of credit to selected interests in the community.

The labor situation also is fraught with obvious danger to the balanced and orderly readjustment of the economic structure. The restriction of immigration has strengthened the strategic position of organized labor.

President Harding has recently declared that the nation is "olvent financially, sound economically, untried in genius, unexcelled in industry, resolute in determination and unwavering in faith." If the basic economic and financial factors can be wisely protected and these human qualities can be assured free play, there need be no interruption to the continued progress of the United States towards prosperity.

It would be folly, however, not to recognize that such protection and freedom can by no means be taken for granted, but demand an intelligent initiative and a sustained courage on the part of the leaders and majority of the people if they are to be assured. The problems in industry, finance and international relations which confront the nation are many and difficult and will severely test its capacity to manage its affairs with wisdom. There is evident a tendency to experiment with theories of finance and administration which have been often discredited by past experience and unless this tendency can be controlled, our present fortunate position may be seriously compromised.

The favorable features in the present situation in the United States, however, would seem definitely to outweigh the unfavorable ones, and there is reason to entertain a sane optimism in regard to the prospect of excellent business conditions for the first six months of 1923 at least, and if the possible difficulties to which reference has been made can be successfully overcome, the coming year should place the nation in a stronger economic and financial position than ever before. Its situation may be deemed favorable indeed, when compared with that of most great countries in the world today, where far heavier burdens exist and far more harassing and critical problems now confront their peoples.

LITTLE GIRL IS SHOT
IN FOREHEAD WHILE
ALONE IN HER HOME

New York, N. Y. Dec. 27.—The murder of Teresa McCarthy, aged ten, known in the Brooklyn neighborhood where she lived as the "little vamp" because of her wifemongers and lewdly complexion, ended her pale career today.

The girl was found with a bullet hole in her forehead by her mother Mrs. Pauline McCarthy when the latter returned from her work late last night. The little body was lying on the floor of the dining room surrounded by Christmas toys.

The child had been alone all day while the mother a divorcee was at work. When Mrs. McCarthy returned she found the apartment door locked and had to get the janitor before she could enter. Police who were called immediately declared there was no evidence of anyone having been in the apartment.

SENTENCES HANDED OUT IN THREE OF
THE LIQUOR LAW VIOLATIONS TODAY

Judge Bell hustled a trio of "run of the mine" bootleggers into "the gob" at a post-Christmas session of sentence court this morning.

The first pair called were Felix Mackey and Henry Anderson, who had entered pleas of guilty to violation of the liquor law. In moving for sentence District Attorney Arnold styled Mackey and Anderson as just common ordinary "run of the mine" bootleggers, stating they had already spent some time in the hock-gow.

Moved by the yuletide spirit Judge Bell thereupon directed that each of the pair pay $100 fine and the costs in his case and be dumped in "the gob" for a period of 80 days. However, as they had already served more than that time he arranged a parole and gave them until the first Monday of May to pay fine and costs.

William Collins, who hails from Falls Creek, and who had a "sprag" put in his business by Federal District Head Sprague a little more than two weeks ago, was also called for sentence upon his admission of guilt. The District Attorney said two cases and two and one-half gallons of liquor had been found in Collins' possession. Collins claimed one of the stills as a family heirloom from the bogs of Connaught, while the other he said had been a present. Collins was described as a troubadour, but homeopathic chemist and taking that fact into consideration Judge Bell sentenced Collins to pay $100 fine and costs and spend four months in jail, with the condition that upon payment of fine and costs within 30 days a parole from further jail sentence might be asked for.

The remainder of the list of twenty-six liquor law violators to acknowledge their shortcomings by plea of guilty or who were convicted at December criminal court will be disposed of tomorrow.

DEFECTIVE WIRING
CAUSES FIRE IN

The fire alarm sounded about 10:45 o'clock this morning for a fire in District No. 36. The flames located the blaze at the home of John Rhone on Merrill street, where an electric wire in the pantry was found to be burning. The applicator of a small dose of chemical soda put the fire out of business and the excitement was over.

The Rhone home is quarantined for diphtheria and the firemen did not linger long about the premises.

EGG EXHIBIT AT
BOUND TO ATTRACT

The egg exhibit that has been planned in connection with the State Farm Products Show at Harrisburg, January 23 to 26, will embody a valuable lesson for Clearfield County farmers and poultrymen. The principal aim of the exhibit this year will be to create a greater appreciation of the market demands, and to demonstrate the various methods of handling and packing eggs.

Too often, Pennsylvania farmers ignore the dollars-and-cents value of a product that is strictly uniform as to color, size and quality. It puzzles a great many of our poultrymen to explain how it is that California eggs, produced on the coast two or three weeks ago, and taking a week in transit, can appear on our eastern markets tomorrow and command a higher price than the Pennsylvania product. It is not the fault of the Pennsylvania hen. Neither is it because the California hen lays a better egg than our own birds, nor that the California farmer has a "pull" with our eastern dealers. It is the blame of the farmer who continues to send his eggs to market ungraded, with small and large eggs, brown and white eggs, all in the same basket.

The secret, if it may be so called, of the California system is that they ship a clean, uniform product, in neat, clean containers.

Some of our Clearfield county farmers will be interested in sending an exhibit in to the egg show. Further information will be gladly furnished by the Poultry Extension Department at State College, Pa., or the Secretary of Agriculture, at Harrisburg. To those who have the best displays in the exhibit, cash premiums and ribbons will be awarded.

TEACHERS WANT TO HOLD INSTITUTE EARLIER IN YEAR

Advocates Election
of Teachers Earlier In
Year and Make Other
Worthy Suggestions.

COVER BIG FIELD

The teachers of Clearfield County assembled here last week passed a constructive set of resolutions which it is our privilege to publish. They advocate:

The holding of the institute during the first week of September.

That the secretaries of school boards furnish the County Superintendent with a list of teachers elected before the first of August.

That the legislature rectify the salary increment provision in the school code so that fourth class districts will share equally.

A uniform selective course of study.

A tenure of office policy for school teachers.

Electing of teachers for the following year as soon after January first as possible.

Granting assistance from the state in the maintenance of rural school buildings and the publication in newspapers of the so-called Kaiser's Message and of any writing coming from the German royal family, styling them falsehoods which may contaminate American youth.

Also commend the Department of Education for its progressive steps in raising the standards of the schools in Pennsylvania.

RESOLVED—1. That it is the sense of this Institute that the Clearfield County Institute should be held during the week of the Monday nearest the first of September, and we regret that the resolution of the Institute last year on this subject was not complied with by those in authority.

2. That we very respectfully request the secretaries of school boards (Continued on Page Two)

The Erie Theatre, a motion picture house, and the piano store of Helen Shaffer, adjoining, were destroyed, and the Buck building was badly damaged. The total loss was estimated at $100,000.

The Erie Theatre building was a two-story brick structure only recently completed.

The fire broke out in the theatre about three o'clock this morning. An investigation is being made in connection with reports that the fire was caused by the explosion of motion picture films. The entire fire department was called out to fight the flames.

Fireman Joseph Rose was badly but not seriously hurt when a floor collapsed beneath him and he fell to the floor below.

JOHNSON, OLD PAL OF BORAH TO LEAD FIGHT AGAINST HIM

Washington, Dec. 28.—Senator Hiram Johnson, new leader of the Senate irreconcilables, was to sponsor for the action today against Senator Borah's proposal for an invitation to the world to bring its economic problems to America for settlement.

Johnson, in a speech, was expected to brand the Borah plan as a long step in the direction of American membership in the League of Nations, or if not, for a permanent entanglement in European affairs.

Johnson and other irreconcilables who were closely associated with Borah in the Versailles treaty fight have broken with him on his new proposal so that the Idaho Senator now faces opposition from both regular G. O. P. and his old irreconcilable friends.

Washington, Dec. 28.—President Harding today announced his opposition to the passing by the Senate of the Borah resolution requesting the Executive to call an International Economic Armament Limitation conference.

The President declared that the passing of the Borah resolution was undesirable "because of the false impressions which may be conveyed to Europe and have been made undesirable by the impressions already conveyed to Americans' position was revealed in a letter to Senator Lodge, Acting Senate Leader in the Senate."

It would be futile to call such a conference as proposed by Borah until the Executive had learned that such a move would be welcome by the other nations, Mr. Harding said.

BRITISH WAR FLEET ORDERED TO RETURN TO CONSTANTINOPLE

TURKS ADAMANT IN REFUSAL TO GIVE UP MOSUL OIL FIELD

Lausanne, Dec. 28.—Turks today threatened a break-down of the Lausanne Conference to giving up the rich Mosul oil lands to Great Britain.

In face of threats by Marquis Curzon, British Foreign Minister, that the conference will reach a breaking point within a week unless the Turks capitulate on half a dozen points, Ismet Pasha, armed with orders from Ankara, refused to give way.

The Ankara Assembly severely rebuked its delegate for his conciliatory assertions and warned him not to sign any treaty until it is approved by the Assembly itself.

Washington, Dec. 28.—The Senate today passed a resolution instructing Vice President Coolidge to express to former President Woodrow Wilson the great pleasure and joy with which the Senate has heard the news of his recovery to good health.

CLEARFIELD F. O. E. TO BRING A NOTED SPEAKER HERE WED.

Judge O'Donnell, From
Kansas City, Will Tell
Aims of the Lodge at
Big Public Meeting.

YOU ARE INVITED

Next Wednesday evening, January 3, Clearfield Aerie Fraternal Order of Eagles will hold a public meeting in the Globe Theatre. The purpose of the meeting is largely to inform the public regarding the aims, principles and past achievements of the Order. Specifically the meeting can be said to be for purpose of furthering the Old Age Pension movement and new membership activities.

The orator of the evening will be Judge O'Donnell of Kansas City, Mo., one of the best platform speakers before the public today. Judge O'Donnell has been in active work in behalf of the Old Age Pension law for some time and has the subject well in hand. He has traveled all over the country in this behalf and will present the subject in such light that even the most skeptical will at least be impressed.

When it is remembered that the Fraternal Order of Eagles is only twenty-five years old as an organization; that its membership will soon reach the million mark; that during the past year over 42,000 new members were enrolled; the stability, strength, service and great worth of this Order will be appreciated.

Up to the present year the Fraternal Order of Eagles has paid out over twenty-four million dollars for sick benefits, funeral benefits and medical service. It has paid to the families of soldiers who gave up their lives in the World War over thirteen hundred thousand dollars and is still paying to the wives orphans and parents of World War victims who are passing away from the wounds or injuries received in that gigantic struggle.

Everybody is invited to attend the meeting next Wednesday evening. It will be free and all will be welcome. Judge O'Donnell will prove a most popular speaker and all will be pleased to hear him and his message.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAM NOSED COLLEGIANS OUT OF A VICTORY

In the fastest and tightest game of the season to date, Clearfield High's stalwart passers succeeded in nosing out the College Five, 37 to 36, an extra five-minute period being necessary to settle the issue. It was a game of thrills, fast passing and in spots rather rough. The fair sized crowd that witnessed the contest was treated to some real play, for from the initial toss-up 'till the final whistle, not more than two baskets separated the two teams at any time.

The score at half time stood 11 to 11, and the close of the regular final session found the count again even at 30 each. In the extra period the Red and Black floor men garnered 7 points, while the college boys failed by a point to tie it up again.

Not much can be said of the game as to detail. It was just a good, clean and hotly contested clash, in which the high schoolers upset the dope by winning. To defeat such a galaxy of stars at "Bill" Ammerman, Duane Keefe, Eddie Butler, Lawrence Howe and Flegall, who represent some of the best basket ball men turned out by C. H. S. in recent years, was a thing the shyns doped into side. However, the local High students were able to play a wonderful defensive game, considering who their opponents were, and incidentally (Continued on Page 4).

Noted Divine, Who Was Detained By Wreck And Did Not Arrive On First Attempt, Coming Sunday

Rev. Dr. F. A. McGarrath of New York City, one of the foremost divines of the Presbyterian church will preach at both morning and evening service at the Presbyterian church of Clearfield, Sunday, Dec. 31st. Dr. McGarrath has a message that will interest every one whether a member of any church or of none. It's a privilege to hear such a speaker that we don't often have. We hope many will avail themselves of the opportunity, each service will be on entirely different lines—but both instructive and helpful.

Service begins at 10:30 a. m. and 7:03 p. m.

Man Held For Part In Outrages by Masked Mob Denied Release On Bail

Baltimore, D. C., Dec. 28.—Release on bail today was denied M. M. McKoin, former Mayor of Mer Rouge, La., arrested here on the charge of Gov. John M. Parker, of Louisiana, for having had part in the murder of two men by a masked mob last August.

Chief Judge Gorter and Judges Bond and Stein, sitting to hear McKoin's corpus proceedings started by former United States District Attorney, Robert Calman and Doctor Young, remanded Dr. McKoin to the custody of the police until the Louisiana, for having had part in the murder of two men by a masked mob last August.

A telegram from Gov. Parker to States Attorney Robert Leach, received this morning, asked that such action be taken.

POOL ROOM OWNER MUST CLOSE UP

Judge Bell's "sentence court" attracted a gallery of several hundred spectators to the court room this morning where the bootleggers, moonshiners and other liquor law violators, together with those malefactors convicted of various degrees of crimes at the December criminal court were scheduled for final disposition, with its application of the punishment to fit the crime, as old "Pooh Bah" used to require in the comic opera "Mikado."

Stoneville Agent Promises to Quit. The court bell rang at 10 o'clock and Judge Bell took his seat on the bench about 15 minutes later. The first defendant called for sentence by District Attorney Arnold was Scott Hess of Stoneville who made a sale of two to a couple of Federal dry officers under the direction of Division Head Sprague of Punxsutawney.

Constable George the Bell. A. C. Edwards, the local tax driver and erstwhile constable of the Third Ward, was then called by District Attorney Arnold referred to the sale of the defendant's business, stating same had continued from the first of the year down to the arrest. Attorneys W. A. Hagerly and A. Roy Chase interceded for Edwards.

Judge Bell then told this was a decidedly unpleasant case for him, knowing the defendant as he did, up was evidenced by his appointment to the position of constable. He said the prisoner possessed higher intelligence than the average violator and was personally likable. He then sentenced him to pay $100 fine and undergo imprisonment in the county jail for a period of twelve months, with the privilege of applying for a parole at the end of six months.

Given a Lecture. Edgar Meize of Clearfield, who was convicted of purchasing liquor for Ephraim Leach, was called after some friendly advice from Judge Bell his case was postponed until the first Monday of February the Judge stating he believed that to be the best solution of the matter. He pays the costs by that time and properly conducts himself meanwhile further sentence will be suspended.

Prompt Payment Wins Release. Owen Smeal, of Ironsboro, who was found with a quart of whiskey in his car following a collision and who entered a plea of guilty to transporting liquor, was held up or taken up (Continued on Page 2).

Heavy Petition Is Filed To Save Ed. Bywater And Woman

London, Dec. 28.—The appeal of Frederick Edward Bywaters, twenty-year-old naval steward, again sentenced to death for the murder of his sweetheart's husband, went to the Home Secretary today backed by a monster petition, containing more than one billion signatures. Two automobile trucks were required to carry the latter.

Bywaters was sentenced jointly with Mrs. Edith Thompson, eight years his senior, for the murder of her husband October 4. She is soon to become a mother.

The Lord Chief Justice refused to consider a joint appeal for clemency earlier in the month and the couple will be hanged together in the Pentonville jail unless Bywater's appeal is successful.

Harry Rhine, of Gettysburg is the guest of his brother Charles M. Rhine at present.

BOUNTY SEASON IS ON AND STATE IS PAYING BIG SUMS

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 28. (U. P.)—The regular winter bounty season beginning with this month is showing a number of bounty claims equal to last years record according to game officials here. Though bounties are paid on varmints killed at any season of the year by far the greatest amount is killed during December, January and February.

Most of the bounties are claimed by persons living in the rural districts of the State, principally farmers who having less to do during the winter months devote more of their attention to trapping and killing animals on which the State pays a bounty.

Since the beginning of the present bounty system in 1918 the State has paid $912,777 in bounties. During the last year, Dec. 1921 to Dec. 1922—bounties amounting to $121,819.56 were paid it was announced today. This amount is not (Continued on Page 2).

TEACHERS WANT TO

to furnish a certified list of teachers to the county superintendent before the first of August of each year in order that he may have an authentic mailing list for an earlier institute.

3. That we very respectfully petition the Department of Education and the Legislature to make the increment in salary uniform throughout the state so that fourth class districts are not discriminated against.

4. In that all reputable institutions of learning publish a course of study that prospective students may know what to select and where they will land at the end of four years, we very respectfully petition the Department of Education to publish a course of study for school teachers of the Commonwealth so that summer after summer they may intelligently pursue the course to a definite end.

5. That we favor a tenure of office policy in the teaching profession in order that there may be more stability and permanency in carrying on the work of the schools, and that we furthermore ask the school directors of this county to elect the school teachers for the term of 1923-24 as soon after January as possible. The reasons for this resolution are self-evident and argument is not needed.

6. That we urge our representatives in the Pennsylvania State Legislature to give us greater assistance in financing the Public School activities of the State to the end that school boards may receive their appropriations promptly in order that embarrassments may be relieved and a better and more confident spirit may be nurtured. That the Public Schools should have larger appropriations, and that State College, the pride of our Commonwealth, may not go begging among the school teachers and school children for financial aid.

7. That we deplore the prominence given to the Ex-Emperor of Germany by the American News Papers and Magazines in publishing and advertising his writings on the World War. These lies thrust upon the American people, read by many and believed by some, have greatly enriched the Kaiser's purse and correspondingly made us poorer, not only in money but in American ideals. The only information that should interest us about such monsters and monstrosities is their everlasting internment in tombs, which appear not, and the men that walk over them know it not. Such blasted lies that appear in his biography can do no good and might prove to be fares, in the minds of the American youth.

8. That we commend the Department of Education for its progressive steps in raising the standards of the schools of this Commonwealth that better teachers and better pay go hand in hand; that Dr. Finnegan deserves the commendation of every school teacher in Pennsylvania.

9. That we extend to Supt. W. E. Trostle our sincere thanks and appreciation for providing the splendid program for this institute, and for his untiring efforts in behalf of the best interests of the schools of Clearfield County.

10. That we thank the Clearfield Board of Education for the use of its splendid auditorium in the high school building for our institute; that we thank the Janitors for the efficient services in keeping us warm and comfortable; that we thank the Ministers of the Gospel for their time and services in opening our institute; that we thank Supt. Geo. E. Zerfoss and Prof. Kopp, of the Clearfield schools for the many courtesies extended to us and the perennial welcome which emanated from their day after day.

11. Last but not least, be it further resolved that we shall now go back to our respective schools determined to get something done worthy the profession, that would

Driving Comfort in Winter

The Buick "Model 45" Six Cylinder—$1195

As complete as has been the development of the enclosed car, Buick designers have not neglected to improve the open type of car, building into it a measure of comfort, convenience and weather protection surpassed only by the more expensive closed vehicles.

Protection against wind and snow is assured by the snug-fitting storm curtains that open with the doors. The Buick design of storm curtains with a special weather strip provides a coziness, comparable to that of any closed car, while windshield wiper and tight fitting windshield, adjustable from within, make driving safe and comfortable.

Aided to this, and equally important in winter driving, is the improved performance that a Buick car always produces—its constant and surplus power—its roadability and perfect balance as a life unquestioned dependability.

For cold weather driving there is no superior to the Buick open cars.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

CURWENSVILLE

Wm. Garlock, who has been working in Greenville, in the western part of the state, for almost a year, came home on Saturday and will remain until the spring months come along.

Mrs. Lida Wrigley, whose home in Chester county, accompanied her two sons, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Jason Spencer, near Edgeport. The Spencer family had planned a family reunion Christmas dinner but owing to illness in the Richards family at Grampian, the event had to be postponed until a future date.

Tom Sheridan spent a few days with his brothers, James and Walter, the latter part of last week.

Stanley Kujawa, working in Pittsburgh can't come Monday for a family Christmas dinner with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kujawa.

George Killeberger, Jr., returned home Tuesday from a week's jaunt in and around Johnstown and Pittsburgh. While in the Smoky City he was doing some work along the line of American Legion interests.

Mr. and Mrs. William Twigg, Huntington avenue, enjoyed a family dinner with friends at Sandy Ridge on Monday. Mrs. Twigg remained over there and will visit among old friends for the balance of the week.

Lawrence Volpe is nursing a wounded finger, caused by it coming in contact with a sharp piece of wire.

Died at her home in Altoona on Monday evening, after a ten day illness of pneumonia, Cora C. Raybold, wife of John C. Raybold, superintendent of the Altoona Gas Company.

Deceased was the third daughter of James and Martha A. Norris and was born on the farm now occupied by Atlee Norris in Pike township on August 26th, 1873; hence at date of demise was aged 49 years, 3 months and 26 days. She received a common school education, and then learned the printing trade, under tutelage of R. H. Brainard, of the Review. About the year 1892, she was united in marriage with John C. Raybold, taking up their residence at Grampian, where Mr. Raybold was employed as station agent for the Penna Railroad Company.

After a residence in that town for several years, the family came to Curwensville and a few years later to Clearfield and thence to Altoona. She was a member of the M. E. church of this place. Surviving her are her husband and one son; the mother, Mrs. Martha Norris, brothers C. O. Norris, this place; Atley Foster and Veigh, of Pike township; Mrs. Hoover, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Henry Hile, Mrs. Venie Miller and Miss Jean Norris of this place. Funeral services will be held from her late home in Altoona on Wednesday afternoon. The body will be brought to the home of C. O. Norris on noon Penna train Thursday and lay in state, where friends can view body until 1:30 p. m. after which a short funeral service will be held by Rev. Dr. Collins. Interment in Oak Hill cemetery.

Monday, Christmas Day, proved an ideal one, the sun shining out brightly making the atmosphere warm and pleasant outside. The day opened by a treat at the Moose home to the children. A thousand pounds of candy, hundreds of oranges, and barrels of nuts were handed out by "Barney" Ayers, who played the role of Santa Claus. The bright and happy faces of the kiddies must have carried Santa back to his boyhood days, for he was not a darn bit stingy about scattering his gifts about. It was a great time for the little ones and a Christmas day that will long remain in the memory of all those who were present. Not only were the little ones made glad but during Sunday evening and Monday forenoon more than half a hundred baskets containing a chicken and other eatables for a good dinner were left at homes of the needy. The members of the Loyal Order of Moose of Curwensville did not go half way in spreading broadcast Christmas cheer this year, for the writer incidentally learned that over three hundred dollars was expended in this work. Had it not been for the efforts made by this organization the kiddies would have been minus their usual public treat. Years have come and gone, they have multiplied into decades and scores mayhap, yet each has echoed the anniversary anthem, "Peace on earth, good will to men." That song said to the heart—BE GLAD; and with a philosophy truly human we had a demonstration of the saying on Monday morning in front of the Moose home on north Filbert street. Once again, as a common brotherhood, we greeted each other on the anniversary of the birth of the God-man. He who taught the world this most beautiful, most pure, most noble philosophy—a philosophy all may rest upon. May the new year, which is fast approaching, bring to all readers of The Progress and others too, health, wealth and happiness, is the sincere wish of the Curwensville correspondent.

The Methodist Sabbath school held no particular exercises on Sunday morning, but the pupils of the infant departments were remembered by each receiving a small box of choice candy.

Midnight mass was held in St. Timothy Catholic church Sunday. The edifice was beautifully decorated for the occasion and the singing was of such a character that it brought peace and cheer into the hearts of all.

The Presbyterian church held its services on Sabbath evening, consisting of songs and recitations, at the conclusion of which the usual gifts and remembrances were distributed.

Christmas exercises took place in Grace Lutheran church on Sunday evening. This Sabbath school had prepared and executed a lengthy and interesting program. The participants certainly did themselves honor in the manner their particular parts were performed. One of the pleasing numbers on the program was the singing of little Gertrude Erhard.

At the Baptist church on Monday evening a pleasing exercise was rendered which was indeed a credit to those who had it in charge, at the conclusion of which the school children were compensated by receiving a usual Christmas treat of candy, nuts, etc.

A year has been rung into the past by fleeting time. An experience novel enough for a romance yet prosaic enough for a treatise has been ours in the interim, for "many men of many minds" have been met, studied and written of, and almost every kind of local industry or pursuit has received mention at our hand. Scores of marriages have been chronicled, and alas, many, many deaths. Accidents, fires, family reunions, history and speculation, politics and religion the fruits of thoughtful research and comment 'al'abandon, all these and more—such has been the field of the Curwensville correspondent's letters to The Progress' work. Scores of people who have read our battling with life have gone beyond yet we are still permitted to survive and go on with our work. Others have married, gone in or out of business, been maimed, crippled, or afflicted, visited by fire, fortune or disaster, made happy by fortuitous conditions or rendered miserable by the trials of adversities innumerable. Some have reached, perhaps, every projected desire and now view with joyous elation, the prospects of the morrow, while others ask if the new year be really worth living, and if life itself is not a farce. The Progress writer who lives with the people and learns of them, reads of them, and writes of them sees all of these things. The great pulse of human life stirs him, moves him and moulds him—yet his individuality must remain. We must censure and praise, and be censured and praised, and his trials are naught to the public while the public is an all to him. In Curwensville alone there are probably five or six hundred persons who peruse the columns of the Progress daily. We cannot greet them all a year hence, for many will be recorded in the record of "Deaths." The recorder himself may be there written of by other hand than that now guiding the pencil. These things are veiled from us. It is well Peace—gentle, soothing, placating peace—rest upon us all during the year 1923. May good will, thy necessary servant, pervade this community and the whole earth. In closing we wish to thank one and all who have contributed in any way to the success of the Curwensville letter.

HOW TO KEEP YOUR BABY WELL

A Weekly Talk To Mothers Issued Through The Babies' Prophylactic Clinic, Henry Phipps Institution, 7th and Lombard Streets.

Make Believe
Children live in a world of their own. You never can be really sure of what a child is thinking, or how his little mind is working.

When a child is two years old until he is about six or seven, he imagines all sorts of things. He begins to know a large number of objects and persons and names and arranges them in many different combinations to suit his own childish fancies.

These fancies or day dreams are but imagination. All of us need imagination, but some of us have less of it than others. We need it to put ourselves in the other fellow's place. It develops the quality of sympathy. Then, too, imagination is of practical importance, particularly to a child, because it is a help in learning. The child who thinks he is a dog or cat will watch those animals very closely in order to imitate them, and so unconsciously takes note of their ways and habits.

Your child's world of make-believe is very real to him. If he is playing a role, you must try to enter into the game with him. Should Mary be a princess for the time being, she will resent a presumptuous command to come to dinner, but will appear quickly enough when she is summoned like this "Will the princess kindly lead the way to the dining room?"

You will find the imaginative boy or girl much easier to amuse than the one with little imagination. He will not constantly be asking, "What shall I do?" He will invent his own games.

Married children do not need elaborate toys to make them happy. Two or three empty boxes held together with a string and decorated with a smoke stack of an unpainted pencil will make an adequate train for your little ones.

Encourage your child's imagination. Let him hear about fairies and Santa Claus and enjoy those things that will give him his own little Kingdom of Make-Believe.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY

The Christmas festival was most appropriately celebrated at St. John's church at all the services on Sunday last. The Sunday School had special music and several classes emphasized the spirit of the day by presenting gifts worthy of mention. Class No. 11 thru their committee gave two loads of coal to needy families and two $10.00 coupon books for groceries to others. Class No. 3 presented their teacher Mr. E. O. Tobias with a beautiful silk umbrella and remembered the pastor with a similar gift. This class also gave a $10.00 coupon book to a worthy family. The Sunday School as a whole presented the pastor with a fine silver communion service.

The special service for the day was held at 7:30 in the evening when "White Gifts for the King's Birthday" a beautiful Christmas Play was given with all its symbolic significance before a large congregation. The cast of characters was made up of the following: King Mr. Harry Carlson; Herald, Miss Salome Davis; Interpreter, Mr. Paul Dietzel; Men Givers, R. L. Cathcart; Richard Emmig, W. E. Davis, George Mann; Woman Giver Mrs. Irvine Miller; Child Giver, Laura Dietzel; King's attendants, Mrs. Harry McIlvain, Mrs. R. L. Cathcart and Mr. Guy Barger. Miss Lila Tobias gave a recitation "White Gifts" of service, self and substance were solicited. Of "substance" there was contributed $160.00 which will be shared between Russian Relief and Ministerial Relief.

At the close of the service the service the pastor Rev. Hauser, read a special communication which was handed him and advised him of the fact that the congregation in appreciation of his services had unanimously granted an increase of $200.00 to his salary dating from November 1, 1922. It was a fitting culmination to a wonderful display of Christlike giving and highly significant of the feeling of this congregation for their earnest hard-working leader.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Here is the amazing, the very, experience of Robert T. Lincoln, son of President Lincoln, and now in his 80th year. He related it recently to a friend and, so far as I know, it has never before been published: Young Lincoln was in the army and stationed in Virginia when he received an order to report at Washington. He got into the theatre just in time to see his father receive his fatal wound. Young Lincoln was Secretary of War under Garfield. He was asked by the President to meet him at the station and he reached there just as Garfield was assassinated.

Mr. Lincoln received an invitation to attend the formal opening of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, and accompanied by his family, got there just in time to see President McKinley shot by Czolgoz.

A friend happened to be with Mr. Lincoln when he received an invitation to attend a Presidential function at Washington a few years ago. He then remarked something to the effect that, "If they only knew, they wouldn't want me there." And he recited his experience as here re-related.—B. C. Forbes, in Forbes Magazine.

We hear all manner of suggestions or proposed changes in the deer law at the coming session of the Pennsylvania legislature, so we hasten to turn in with ours, while the "horning" is good. If we must have a change in the deer law why not eliminate the shooting of "spike" bucks and cut the camp limit from six down to four bucks. With a smaller camp limit, the hunter could afford to spend some time looking them over. Let the deer alone; they are hunting no one.

How much do you weigh? Are you above or below what you should be, considering your height? Here's a table showing what you should weigh, to have an ideal build at the age of 30:

Women	Pounds
4 feet 8 inches	112
4 feet 9 inches	114
4 feet 10 inches	116
4 feet 11 inches	118
5 feet	120
5 feet 1 inch	122
5 feet 2 inches	124
5 feet 3 inches	126
5 feet 4 inches	128
5 feet 5 inches	130
5 feet 6 inches	132
5 feet 7 inches	134
5 feet 8 inches	136
5 feet 9 inches	138
5 feet 10 inches	140
5 feet 11 inches	142
6 feet	144

Men	Pounds
5 feet	126
5 feet 1 inch	128
5 feet 2 inches	130
5 feet 3 inches	132
5 feet 4 inches	134
5 feet 5 inches	136
5 feet 6 inches	138
5 feet 7 inches	140
5 feet 8 inches	142
5 feet 9 inches	144
5 feet 10 inches	146
5 feet 11 inches	148
6 feet	150
6 feet 1 inch	152
6 feet 2 inches	154
6 feet 3 inches	156
6 feet 4 inches	158
6 feet 5 inches	160

Weight, of course, varies with age. The youth who grows too fast often is built like a pencil when he "reaches his growth" although he threatens to eat his father out of house and home.

At 30 most of us have blossomed fully into maturity of height and weight. Hence the above table shows ideal weights at 30.

A person progressing through middle age will remain about the same weight as at 30 if he or she keeps in good physical trim. Bay windows and other additions to our architecture betray physical neglect. Few of us can resist, stepping on a pair of scales whenever we pass one, especially if there's a "free" sign. And, unless we are under-sized, most of us are highly pleased if we have taken on a pound or so. We reason that, if we aren't losing flesh, things must be all right with us.

This reveals instinctive medical knowledge. For Dr. Eugene Lynam Fisk, who furnishes this table thru the Life Extension Institute, emphasizes, "Beware of underweight. It is obvious, however, that if a person takes sufficient food, exercise and rest, has a good color and is otherwise healthy, he need not worry if he is somewhat under weight according to compiled tables, especially if he be of light framework."

In the last analysis, weight is a condition of the body's endocrine glands.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

RUGAL or unthinking local householders are responsible for several recent fires in this community according to an electrical expert connected with the Underwriters' Association of Pennsylvania, who was called here to investigate some recent fires. According to this expert the householder when a fuse plug was burned out or destroyed, to save the trouble or the five or six cents necessary to replace the fuse plug the "home spun" electrician would insert a penny back of the useless plug and screw same tight against the coin, which would then act as a buffer or bumper, so to speak, and prevent a blow out. It worked like a charm so far as holding the "juice" in less than operation, but when resistance or a flash came something had to give way and a weak place in the insulation did the rest—and the services of the firemen were next in order. When a fuse plug "shoots," replace it with a new one—save your pennies we mean it literally.

The people of the registration district of which Clearfield is a part cannot be blamed with fostering "race suicide" to any great extent as the records in State Registrar W. A. Hagerly's office show that thus far during 1922 there were 269 deaths and 569 births for the district, which is composed of Clearfield and Wallacetown boroughs, Lawrence, Bradford, Doggs, Goshen and Girard townships.

Charges of extravagance in the administration of the state's educational system made against Dr. Thomas S. Finegan, superintendent of public instruction, are denied in the fourth section of the survey of Pennsylvania's fiscal policies in the field of education. The fourth section of the report, made by Dr. Harlan Updegraff of the University of Pennsylvania, was presented Tuesday to Dr. Clyde L. King, chairman of the Finance committee appointed to investigate the finances of the Commonwealth.

For months before the recent election Dr. Finegan and his educational policies were targets for all sorts of charges of extravagance, mismanagement, extravagance, cantism, and general abuse. In the recent campaign John A. McSparran, Democratic nominee for Governor, made an issue of what had come to be known as "Fineganism" and charged Clifford Pinchot was committed to "Fineganism" in the schools.

This section of the report, in part, follows and should be carefully read by all interested in our schools: "The State Departments of Public Instruction of other states increased their personnel more rapidly than did that of Pennsylvania during the fifteen years preceding 1920.

"The number of staff officers now in the State Department of Public Instruction in Pennsylvania in proportion to the number of pupils enrolled in the public schools is near the average for eleven representative states.

"While the salaries paid these staff officers are higher than in other states, they are no higher than was necessary to obtain the services of the individuals employed. The fact that these officers are not permitted to take fees for services in Pennsylvania or to accept contracts for writing books should be taken into account in this connection. Also the fact that in other states the salaries are frequently fixed by statute and are lower than they should be in order to secure persons of the highest efficiency.

Pay No Higher Than Necessary. "Salaries are no higher than are necessary to obtain and hold men and women of high qualifications. Twelve per cent of the staff have left to accept positions elsewhere under conditions that would give them larger financial returns than in the State Department of Public Instruction.

"The expenses of the Department per pupil enrolled in the state and the per capita of population in the state are not quite so high as the average furnished by eleven representative northern states.

"The bureau has been, on the whole, conducted in an efficient manner. It is believed that the data presented relative to the number of schools visited, conferences held, addresses given, letters written, syllabi prepared, hours per day spent at work, etc., when considered in connection with the high qualifications of the staff clearly indicate that the state has received full return for the money expended.

der advisement until the first Monday of February and disposition at that time will depend upon the defendant's conduct during the coming month. He was told to pay the costs in the meantime and promptly pulled a roll of bills from his pocket, saying "I'll just pay them now," which he did.

Joe Yowasky, violation of liquor law, sentenced to pay costs within 30 days.

Interested Drivers Up. Casimir Rokosky, of West Liberty, who entered a plea of guilty to operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, was sentenced to pay $100 fine and costs and serve 10 days in jail.

Robert Bailay, of DuBois, formerly of Armstrong county, who entered a similar plea, was sentenced to pay $100 fine and costs, but as he had already served 14 days in jail, no further sentence was imposed, the fine and costs to be paid within ten days.

Jacob Maines, of Bradford, who entered a plea of guilty to a bootlegging charge, having served a sentence of 30 days in jail, was given six months in which to pay the $100 fine and costs imposed.

Leslie J. Wise, the West Side pool room proprietor, was given until the first Monday of March to get out of the business at that point. He had entered a plea to a charge of allowing gambling in his place.

Meade Graham—Continued to first Monday of February, 1923 pending physical examination to be made by Dr. John W. Gordon. Case may be disposed of prior to that time if the Commonwealth decides after due notice to the defendant.

Abram McKee, the Kerrtown man, who was convicted of involuntary manslaughter for the killing of R. H. Tubbs, a fellow railway section hand whom he hit on the head with a shovel during an altercation between the men. In imposing sentence, Judge Bell said it was the most distressing case to come before him during his term, inasmuch as it was from his home community and he knew the principals. He said the verdict was a just one under all the circumstances. Said it was the lowest degree of voluntary manslaughter and the highest of involuntary manslaughter. He was then sentenced to pay $1.00 fine and costs and serve two years in county jail with privilege to apply for a parole after fifteen months. The defendant was given until next Wednesday to arrange his affairs and begin his sentence.

HOW TO FORGET
TROUBLES

TROUBLES knock up your system like a fast runner knock down his opponent.

Troubles deal blows both in the head and stomach—and they hurt the stomach more than they do the head!

Troubles give the stomach indigestion, slow up the liver—and then follow constipation and biliousness.

The way to get rid of troubles is to invigorate digestion, stimulate liver and bowels and tone up the entire system. The best way to do this—has been for the past 20 years—is to take Searles' Pink Pills.

Then you will feel so good that troubles become merely guests, to be dismissed easily by the clear, keen brain of health.

WORLD POPULARITY OF AMERICAN MACHINERY

By O. P. Austin, Baltimore
THE NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK

From the WEEKLY TRADE RECORD, issued by The National City Bank

American machinery and the type of mechanical genius in the United States which leads the world in this particular, and their value both for potential service during the war, went to approximately $4,000,000,000 in the last decade against $1,000,000,000 in the decade immediately preceding, and $350,000,000 in the ten years ending with 1901, and the machinery is going in increasing quantities to every country and colony of the world.

The list of articles forming this group of "machinery" includes quite properly such important articles as locomotives, automobiles and the engines by which they are operated, electrical machinery, agricultural machinery, sewing machines, typewriters, cash registers, adding and calculating machines, meat working machinery, mining machinery, textile machinery, printing presses, and the thousands and one evidences of American genius which have made our mechanical and industrial world in every part of the globe, and brought into the last quarter of a century in payment for this class of output of our shops and factories. They represent the highest of machinery in scope of output in every part of the world. We have sold to the outside world over $4,000,000,000 worth of machinery in the last decade against $1,000,000,000 in the decade immediately preceding, and $350,000,000 in the ten years ending with 1901, and the machinery is going in increasing quantities to every country and colony of the world.

An evidence of the wide popularity of this product of the American factory is illustrated in the fact that the locomotives exported from the United States in even the lean trade year 1921 went to 35 different countries of the world and in the year 1920 to 45 countries; cash registers, a very recent factor in the exports of machinery, went in 1921 to 60 countries and colonies representing every grand division of the globe, while adding machines, a still more recent factor in the export line, went to approximately 30 countries for the same year. Elevators and elevator machinery, long popular in the United States, but more recently a requirement of the every day life in other parts of the globe went to 24 countries in 1921; gasoline engines, another comparatively recent type of machinery to 75 countries; traction engines, a still newer factor in the daily life of the world to over 60 countries; laundry machinery to a score of countries; and the list of machinery of which the United States has become especially famous during the war, went to approximately 40 countries. Automobiles, in which the United States naturally leads the world, air compressors, cream separators, and other machinery to a score of countries, while the United States, long a leader in the world around went to every part of the globe as did the more recent requirements for transportation purposes, the motor car and now the commercial automobile which last year was exported over 75 countries and territories scattered the world over.

The growth in world popularity of the American machinery, and the quality of the man who produces it is largely the result of the acquaintance which the world made with it during the war, as is evidenced by the fact that the value of machinery exported in the last decade is more than ten times as much as in the ten years preceding and twelve times as much as in the decade ending with 1901.

The Girl On The Edge Of A Cliff

CHAPTER II.

Dorothy, unlike Gilbertine Murray was not to be read at a glance, and her trouble—as not one she chose to share with any one, even with me. I could not but ask, if the varying moods by which I had found myself secretly harrowed had not sprung from a cause for which my persistent love was more to blame than the emptier of her relative. The aversion she had once shown to my attentions had yielded long ago to a shy, but seemingly sincere appreciation of them, culminating today in that safe pressure of my hand which had awakened my hopes, and made me forget all the doubts and caprices of a disturbing courtship.

But had I interpreted that strong nervous pressure aright? Had it necessarily meant love. Might it not have sprung from a sudden desperate resolution to accept a devotion which offered her a way out of difficulties especially falling to one of her gentle but letty spirits? Her expression when she caught my look of joy had little of the demure tenderness of a maiden blushing at her first involuntary avowal. There was shrinking in it, but it was the shrinking of a frightened woman, not of an abashed girl. Had I mistaken my darling's feelings? Or had she secretly yielded to another what she had so long denied me and—

"Ah!" said Sinclair at this juncture, "I see that I have roused you at last." "You begin to see what a question of the most serious import is before us, and that this question must be answered before we separate for the night."

"I do," said I. "Then so much is gained. The next point is, how are we to settle our doubts? We can not approach either of these ladies with questions. A girl wretched enough to contemplate suicide would be especially careful to conceal both her misery and its cause. Neither can we order a search made for an object so small that it can be concealed about the person. Yet this jewel must be recovered. Listen Sinclair, I will have a talk with Dorothy, you with Gilbertine. If a secret lurks in either breast our tenderness should find it out."

But before we proceed to such extreme measures, let us make sure that there is no shorter road to the truth. Some one may have seen which of our two girls went back to the library after we all came out of it. That would narrow down our inquiry and save one of them, at least, from unnecessary disturbance.

Mrs. Arms rang, our hostess, was in of gaiety and amusements were lacking. As we stepped down to the great hall we heard music from the drawing room and saw that a party was in progress.

"That is good," observed Sinclair. "I shall run less risk of finding the library occupied."

"I'll not look and see where they are," it would be a great relief to find them both among the dancing."

"I'll go," he said. "I stepped toward the drawing room. A young man greeted me as I passed. I showed myself. But I was alone. I wanted to catch the glimpse I wanted of the party beyond. On a divan near the center was a lady conversing with two gentlemen. Her back was turned toward me, but I had no difficulty in recognizing Miss Murray. She appeared quite at ease and more than usually cheerful."

Believed, I hastened back to Sinclair, who was watching me with furtive eyes from between the curtains of the window. As I joined him, a young man, who was to act as usher, sauntered from behind one of the great pillars and, crossing to where the music room door stood open, disappeared behind it. Sinclair seized me by the arm. "Was that Beaton?" he asked. "Certainly, didn't you recognize him?"

He gave me a very strange look. "Does the sight of him recall anything?"

"No."

"You were at the breakfast table yesterday morning?"

"I was."

"Do you remember the dream he related for the delectation of such as would listen?"

Then it was my turn to go white. "You don't mean—" I began.

"I thought at the time that it sounded more like a veritable adventure than a dream; now I am sure that it was such."

"Sinclair! You do not mean that the young girl he professed himself to have surprised one moonlit night standing on the verge of the cliff, with arms upstretched and a distracted air, was a real person?"

"I do. We laughed at the time; he made it seem so tragic and preposterous. I do not feel like laughing now."

"Beaton mentioned no names," I stubbornly protested. "He did not even call the vision he encountered a woman. It was a wraith, you remember, a dream-creature, a creature of his own imagination, born of some tragedy he had read."

"Beaton is a gentleman," was Sinclair's reply. "He did not wish to injure, but to warn the woman for whose benefit he told his tale."

"Warn?"

"He doubtless reasoned in this way if he could make this young and probably sensitive girl realize that she had been seen and her intentions recognized, she would beware of such attempts in the future."

"Good God, Sinclair, don't let us harrow up ourselves unnecessarily! I saw them both, the girls, a moment ago, and nothing in their manner showed that anything was amiss with either of them."

He drew me toward the library. This room was not frequented by the young people at night. Sinclair wished to show me the cabinet where the box had been.

There was a fire in the grate. When the door had closed behind us we found that this came far made all the light there was in the room.

Sinclair drew a deep breath. "Mr. Armstrong must have gone elsewhere to read the evening papers," he remarked.

Sinclair drew me toward a tall cabinet and pointing to a shelf far above our heads, cried:

"No woman could reach that unaided. Gilbertine is tall, but not tall enough for that. I purposely put it high."

I looked about for a stool. There was one just behind Sinclair. I drew his attention to it.

He flushed and gave it a kick then shivered slightly and sat down in a nearby chair. Gilbertine was taller than Dorothy. This stool might have served Gilbertine if not Dorothy.

I felt a great sympathy for him. After all, his case was more serious than mine. The bishop was coming to marry him the next day.

AUSTRALIA THINKS IT HAS A CRIME WAVE

Sydney. (By Mail to The United Press.)—So accustomed is Australia to having a law-abiding citizenry that a total of 654 persons charged with crime in six months in a city of 800,000—Sydney—is considered a crime wave, and the premier of the state has called a conference to deal with the problem.

It will be proposed that no crime should be made punishable by a jail sentence of less than six months. Although all but 184 of the 654 persons arraigned were convicted or pleaded guilty, it is felt that the judiciary has shown undue leniency in dealing with criminal cases.

Elmer Ray and Miss Margaret Owens entertained the Blue Bird and Victory S. S. classes Christmas evening at their home at Mt. Joy. Delicious refreshments were served and the evening was enjoyed by all.

If you suffer with kidney backache, urinary disorders, or any form of kidney trouble, the advice contained in the following statement should add a valuable asset to your store of knowledge. What could be more convincing proof of the efficiency of Doan's Kidney Pills than the statement of a Clearfield citizen who used them and who publicly tells of the benefit derived?

Mrs. C. E. Reed, 205 Clearfield St., Clearfield, says: "I suffered from kidney trouble. There was a severe pain in the small of my back and I had headaches. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they drove away the pains and headaches. I cannot say too much for Doan's as I think they are perfectly wonderful."

The Search For The Missing Vial

CHAPTER III

"Sinclair," said I, "the stool means nothing. Dorothy has more inches than you think. With this under her feet, she would reach the shelf by standing tiptoe. Besides, there are the chairs."

"True, true!" and he started up, "those are the chairs! I forgot the chairs. I fear my wits have gone wool gathering. We shall have to take others into our confidence. Somehow or by some means we must find out if either of them was seen to come into this room."

"Leave that to me," said I. "Remember that a word might be a clue, and that in a case like this—helloo! what's that?"

A gentle more had come from behind a screen.

Sinclair had already bounded across the room. I pressed hurriedly behind him, and together we rounded the screen and came upon the recumbent figure of Mr. Armstrong, asleep on the lounge.

"That accounts for the lights being turned out," grumbled Sinclair. "Dutton must have done it."

Dutton was the butler.

"I have a notion to wake him," suggested Sinclair.

"It will not be necessary," said I, as the heavy figure stirred.

Mr. Armstrong eyed us with sleepy indifference for a moment, then rose ponderously to his feet.

"What can I do to oblige you?" he asked.

"Pardon me, Mr. Armstrong, we were looking about for a small pin dropped by Miss Camerden. She was in here just now was she not?"

The gentleman bowed, haved, and smiled an unmeaning smile.

"I am sorry, but I am afraid I lost myself for a moment on that lounge," he admitted. "The firelight always makes me sleepy. But some one was in the room. I remember it now. I cannot say that it was Miss Camerden however. I thought it was some one of quicker movement. She made quite a rattle with the chairs."

"Miss Murray?" I suggested.

"Does Miss Murray wear white to-night?"

"Yes," muttered Sinclair, coming hastily forward.

"Then it may have been she, for I caught a glimpse of her skirt as she passed out of the room. And that skirt was white."

Sinclair, turning on his heel, stalked in a dazed way toward the door.

So far as I was concerned the question as to who had taken the box from the library was settled.

It was now half past eight. I made my way from room to room looking for Sinclair. At last I returned to my old post near the library door, and was instantly rewarded by the sight of his figure approaching in company with the butler, Dutton. His face, as he stepped into the full light of the open hall, showed discomposure, but not the extreme discomposure I had anticipated.

"Miss Camerden has lost a pin from her hair," he impressively explained to me. "Then turning to Dutton he melanchantly remarked: 'It must be somewhere in this hall; perhaps you will be good enough to look for it.'"

"Certainly," replied the man "I thought she had lost something when I saw her come out of the library a little while ago holding her hand to her hair."

My heart gave a leap, then sank cold and almost pulseless in my breast. I heard Sinclair's voice rise again in the question with which my name was called.

"When was that? After Mr. Armstrong went into the room, or before?"

"Oh, after he fell asleep. I had just come from putting out the gas when I saw Miss Camerden slip in and almost immediately come out again."

So Mr. Armstrong had made a mistake! It was Dorothy and not Gilbertine whom he had seen leaving the room. I met Sinclair's eye.

"Dorothy's dress is gray tonight," but Mr. Armstrong's eye may not be very good for colors."

"It is possible that both were in the room," was Sinclair's reply. "At all events, we can not prove anything this way; we must revert to our original idea. I wonder if Gilbertine will give me the chance to speak to her."

"You will have an easier task than I," was my half-sullen retort.

"There is to be a rehearsal of the ceremony at half past ten. I might get a word in then; only, this matter must be settled first. I could never go through the farce of standing up before you all at Gilbertine's side, with such a doubt as this in my mind."

"You will see her before then. Insist on a moment's talk. If she refuses—"

"Hush!" he here put in. "We part now to meet in this same place again at ten."

It was some time before I had the opportunity, even if I had the courage, to look Dorothy in the face. When the moment came she was flushed with dancing and looked beautiful. She leaned against the rose-tinted wall and let her eyes for the first time rise slowly to where I stood talking mechanically to my partner.

Gentle eyes they were, made for appeal. But they were held in check by an infinite discretion. Never have I caught them quite off their guard, and tonight they were wholly unreadable. Yet she was trembling with something more than the fervor of the dance, and the little hands were not quiet for a moment. Could her eye rest on mine, even in this cold and perfunctory manner, if the drop which could separate us for ever lay concealed over her heart? She knew that I loved her. And though she would never openly acknowledge my homage and frowned down every attempt on my part at lower-like speech or attention, I was sure that she rated my feelings at their real value. When, therefore, I encountered her eyes at the end of the dance I said to myself:

"She may not love me, but she knows that I love her, and being a woman of sympathetic instincts, would never meet my eyes with so calm a look if she were meditating an act which must infallibly plunge me into misery."

So, taking the bull by the horns, I accused myself to my partner, and crossed to Dorothy's side.

"Will you dance the next waltz with me?" I asked.

Her eyes fell from mine directly and she drew back in a way that suggested flight.

"I shall dance no more tonight," said she, her hand rising in its nervous fashion to her hair.

I made no appeal. I just watched that hand, whereupon she flushed vividly and seemed more than ever anxious to escape. At which I spoke again.

"Give me a chance, Dorothy. If you will not dance come out on the veranda and look at the ocean. I am most anxious to ask you—"

"No, no," she vehemently objected, very much as if frightened.

I felt my heart sink and dreaded lest I should betray my feelings.

"You do not honor me then with your regard," I retorted.

She was silent. Her hand went again to her hair.

I whispered: "If I leave you now will you tell me tomorrow why you are so peremptory with me tonight?"

With eagerness she answered: "Yes, yes, after all this excitement is over." And, slipping her hand into that of a friend who was passing, she was soon in the whirl again of dancing—she who had just assured me that she did not mean to dance again that night.
